Historic Buildings Menaced by Flood

Here are the world-famous buildings threatened by the floods in Paris:

The Elysee Palace, home of President Falieres.
The Paris Opera, the most beautiful opera house in the world.
The Madelaine, the historic church of Paris.
The Louvre, the home of priceless treasures of art, including the Venus de Milo.
The Invalides, which contains the tomb of Napoleon the Great.
The Foreign Office, one of the best examples of modern French architecture.
Chamber of Deputies, the French Capitol.
Court of St. Chapel, most interesting relic of old Paris.

Streets Cave in, Buildings Collapse, Thousands of Lives in Peril, With River Rising Faster Than Ever.

PARIS, Jan. 28.—The Seine at 1 p. m. was rising an inch and a quarter an hour, and the flood is growing worse every minute. It is raining heavily. The Isle St. Louis is threatened with complete inundation which may sweep away ancient landmarks upon it, whose foundations are already undermined.

Telegraphic and telephonic communication between London and Paris has been cut off.

Rains began as the weather turned warmer, releasing ice that had formed on the upper reaches of the Seine and its tributaries. Rising steadily, the water ate into the dykes that had been thrown up, and, with no relief in sight, began a new stage of the calamity.

Looters Shot by Soldiers.

The breaking of the banks of previously immune country districts resulted in slight diminution of the flow through the city at 9 o'clock and the water became stationary. Later it began to rise again. One hundred thousand men—soldiers, police and civilians—to-day struggled to beat back the gaining waters and save the quarters that had not been inundated.

Five looters were shot to-day in the flood-stricken districts after orders had been issued to gendarmes to spare none found in abandoned houses.

In spite of all the harassed authorities could do, several persons were injured to-day by the collapse of undermined pave ments or the bursting of sewers. Through out Paris, mile after mile of roadway is roped off as unsafe, and some of the most famous places are out of use. Here and there disaster has overtaken a street that had not been examined by the overworked engineers, or had appeared safe. The water is making such swift inroads that it is not safe to predict the situation in any one quarter for more than two or three hours.

The flooded area has been doubled. Many of these caves-in left the streets waterfilled trenches from which lpostrude broken and twisted pipes and little mounds of masonry. The undermined streets collapse with so little warning that any one within the danger zone is trapped without a chance of escape.

Streets Crack As in Earthquake.

One of the worst quarters in this respect is that receding from the quai des Grenules Augustins, near the Orleans rail-

LOOTED BANK MAY BE PUT IN HANDS OF A RECEIVER

A receiver is to be asked for in connection with the closed Southbridge Savings Bank, according to a statement made to Judge Sheldon of the Supreme Court to-day by Attorney-General Malone. The Attorney-General also declared that the deficit would be a large one.

The case came up on an order of notice to show cause why the temporary injunction, restraining the institution from doing business, should not be made permanent. Attorney-General Malone appeared in behalf of Bank Commission Chapin, who is acting for the tSate of Massachusetts against the bank. Charles F. Choate, Jr., represented the bank.

Mr. Malone told the Court that he and Mr. Choate had agreed as to a decree which would be acceptable to both sides, if to the Court. When he stated it Judge Sheldon ordered it entered at once.

Under the decree the bank may bring suits and do all other things necessary to collect money; it may invest funds subject to the approval of the bank commissioner under the statutes of 1908 and may foreclose mortgages. The temporary injunction still continues in force.

Attorney-General Malone told to the Court that bank examiners are still probing into the institution's affairs and while it could not yet be stated how great the deficit is, he feared it would be big. He said he thought it likely that the appointment of a receiver might be necessary as a later proceeding.

In Southbridge to-day, fearing that an attack might be made on John A. Hall, the accused treasurer of the bank, his home in

GLAVIS TELLS OF FRAUDS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The Ballinger-Pinchot inquiry began in earnest to-day. The joint investigating committee of the Senate and House went into executive session at 10 o'clock for the purpose of considering the request made for official papers at the departments involved and the summoning of witnesses. At the conclusion of the executive session the public hearing was resumed.

L. R. Glavis, Secretary Ballinger's chief accuser, was again called to the witness stand. More than one hundred persons were present, including Gifford Pinchot and his counsel, George W. Pepper of Philadelphia. Secretary of the Interior Balinger and Commissioner of the Land Office Dennet were not present.

Attorney Brandeis of Boston, for Glavis, submitted to the committee a list of the documents and letters which have not been made public, and which are desired from the general land office as a part of the case. These the committee will officially call for.

Convinced of Frauds.

Resuming his testimony, Mr. Glavis said his examination of the Alaskan coal land claims had convinced him that frauds were perpetrated. He discussed the situation, he said, with United States Attorney Hoyt at Seattle, now Attorney-General of Porto Rico. This was in 1907. Both thought there should be a thorough investigation, as did also Special Agent Jones.

Mr. Hoyt recommended that Glavis report the matter direct to Secretary Garfield. Glavis said he hesitated to go over the heads of his superiors, so he wrote a confidential letter to him while in the land office. H. H. Schwartz, telling him that he, Glavis, was worried about the situation and wished to come to Washington and lay the matter before him.

Later, at the suggestion of Mr. Dennet, assistant in the land office, Mr. Glavis wrote a personal letter to Mr. Schwartz giving his reasons for wishing a thorough investigation of the Cunningham coal claims. This letter was not presented to President Taft, but he reviewed the case.

Counsel read from the reports of Special Agent Jones, confirming the suspicions of fraud, which Glavis entertained.

Reported First by Jones.

"Then you do claim," said Senator Nelson to Attorney Brandeis, "that Mr. Glavis made the discovery of these alleged frauds in Alaskan coal lands?"

"No, sir. Mr. Jones reported them first."

Soon after, Glavis said, he was called back to Washington. He had a long talk with his chief, Mr. Schwartz.

He told the latter that people in Seattle were saying there would be no investigation and that they would get their patents. They discussed the situation. Schwartz said he would see what could be done. Both were afraid there would be a scandal if nothing was done. Schwartz took the matter to Commissioner Ballinger.

Ballinger then sent for Glavis and placed him in charge of all the Alaska coal lands. He told Glavis he wanted a fair investigation, no matter whom it hurt, even if they were his friends. Glavis recommended that Special Agent Love, who was a candidate for the Alaskan marshalship, be eliminated from the investigation. Ballinger agreed to this, and Love was let out.

Would Cancel Claims.

Glavis told Ballinger he thought evidence would warrant the cancellation of all the claims. Glavis testified he was convinced that Ballinger wanted a complete investigation at that time. He added that the frauds consisted of a combination on the part of claimants to pool interests and sell out to corporations in violation of law. In the agreements some of the claimants were to take stock in the companies while others were to receive money for their claims.

WONDERFUL BOSTON BOY—Double page article in SUNDAY AMERICAN will deal with genius and education as demonstrated in this city.

MEAT PRICES TAKE ANOTHER DROP TO-DAY

Prices of meat at the Faneuil Hall market were from one to three cents lower than they have been for a week to-day and dealers were willing to throw off a cent or two a pound from quoted prices in order to make a sale.

Some of the dealers have already taken off some of their teams and they expect business to get worse when the meat boycott begins on Sunday. Sirloin steak was quoted at twenty-eight cents, but when a customer said he could not pay that much the dealer readily offered to take twenty-six cents for it. It was the same way with other meats.

There seemed to be a large supply of meat and few customers. The dealers were loth to admit that the falling off of custom was the result of the agitation. They said that it was the beginning of the "dull season."

Further Drop Predicted.

"Do you anticipate a further drop in the prices when the boycott in Boston really begins?" one dealer was asked.

"I presume there will be a further drop," he admitted. "But then, this is the dull season, anyhow, and we did not expect to do much business at this time."

For the purpose of furthering the movement started throughout the country to have the general public abstain from eating meat for a period, until the high prices on the necessaries of life are reduced, the No-Meat Club, which was recently started in Boston, will hold a mass meeting in Faneuil Hall tomorrow night at 8o'clock.

At this meeting the entire number of officers of this newly formed club, including a large number of Representative and Senators from the State House, will be present, representatives from the packing house have also been invited to attend, as well as representatives from the leading business houses of Boston.

What is the situation to have passed during the meeting a resolution calling for all the Representatives and Senators to pledge themselves to work in the interest of the movement, to secure the co-operation of other Representatives, and to secure the aid of Representatives to have a bill passed by Senator John J. Butler, asking the members of the Legislature of this State and the national Congress to regulate the price of the necessaries of life.

Will Circulate Pledge.

The speakers at the meeting will consist of George J. Raymond, Bernard Rothwell, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Mr. Goldfrank of Somerville, representing the retail meat men; James H. Vahey and other public men of prominence.

Pledges will be circulated during the meeting, asking the signers to boycott the purchasing of meat and to abstain from eating meat for a period of probably thirty days.

The officers of the No-Meat Club consist of E. M. Shanley, president; vice presidents, Felix Mendelsohn, ex-Senator Edward B. Callender, secretary, William H. Scharton; Arthur G. McVey, chairman executive committee; executive committee, Arthur W. Hayden, Representatives P. M. O'Brien, Theodore L. Sourgere, John L. Donovan, Senator John J. Butler and James A. Watson.

The headquarters of the club are situated at No. 31 Tremont street.

FRENCH THANKS FOR CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OFFER

Bernard J. Rothwell, president of the Chamber of Commerce, to-day received from General Dalstein, Military Governor of Paris, the following cablegram in reply to the cablegram of sympathy sent by Mr. Rothwell last night:

Governor of Paris to Mr. Rothwell, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Boston:

I thank you very warmly for the generous measure which you have been good enough to express to me, and I beseech as eloquent it to the government of the republic.

GENERAL DALSTEIN,
Militaire de Paris.

SOCIALISTS PLEAD FOR NEW ELECTION BILL

The Legislative Committee on Election Laws to-day heard ex-Representative James F. Carey and Representative Charles H. Merrill of Haverhill and Squire E. Putney, secretary of the National Organization of Socialists, on a bill to give representation in polling booths and on boards of election to minority parties casting three per cent. of the vote at the preceding State election. They claim that the Socialist vote frequently is not counted.

CALL ARMOUR CAR LINES INTO MEAT INQUIRY

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—The beef trust inquiry took a new and sensational turn when the Federal Grand Jury resumed its sessions to-day. James H. Ebbitins, president of the Armour Car Line Company, was summoned before the Grand Jury on a forthwith subpoena.

As the Armour car lines are one of the most formidable bludgeons used by the trust, the Government charges, the move was regarded as highly significant. The lines, operating through the National Packing Company, has used the Armour cars to beat down competition by exceedingly low freight charges, while trust products were handled at a minimum, according to Government prosecutors.

Mr. Robbins is one of the right hand men of J. Ogden Armour, and it is testimony was expected to be of the greatest value. Special agents of the Department of Justice served the subpoena on him and started him toward the Federal building at once.

At the same time subpoenas were issued for four National Packing Company men. They are Thomas H. Cross, cattle buyer; Charles F. Goepper, hog buyer; F. F. Fuller, sheep purchaser; Leonard B. Patterson, vice president. The testimony of the buyer was expected to be checked up against that given by the Armour and Swift buyers several days ago in an effort to show collusion and agreement on prices on incoming stock between the big packing firms.

Meanwhile Fred W. Upham, president of the board of trade, returned from Washington and denied stories that he had gone there to use his influence in behalf of the packers, and to ask the administration to drop or modify the prosecution.

WHOLESALE HOUSES IN PORTLAND SHAVE DOWN ALL PRICES

PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 28.—The wholesale beef houses of the city all have a large stock on hand for which there is a very light demand, and as a consequence prices have fallen within a week fully one cent per pound.

Lambs have also taken a sharp decline and are selling from two to three cents lower than a fortnight ago.

The result is partially attributable to the boycott on meat, which has become so popular throughout the country. Pork products have fallen but little.

WOMEN IN DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA PUSH HIGH PRICE WAR

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 28.—Convinced that success in the boycott planned against the meat trust will depend upon the interest and co-operation of the women of the District of Columbia, Mrs. J. H. Henderson, state director of the National Anti-Food Trust League for the District of Columbia, and chairman of the women's auxiliary organized at the Arlington Hotel Tuesday afternoon, has called for a meeting of the advisory committee. Ways and means will be discussed at the meeting and plans perfected for another mass meeting to further interest the women of the District in the anti-food league.

RESTAURANTS AID IN THE NEW YORK CRUSADE ON MEAT

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—The restaurants of New York to-day began to fall in line with the thousands of individuals that are supporting the Meat Trust, but at the same time the price of fish advanced.

Max Sonble Isenlinger, the suffragette leader, is leading the crusade to gain all for the big restaurant proprietors as allies to the boycott, and today she announced that one concern, which operates eight restaurants and feeds 40,000 people, had posted cards to each patron with the request that all fare expressing sympathy with the boycott and urging the use of fish and eggs and vegetables instead of meat.

This concern has had its demand for fish doubled. Prices of meat and foodstuffs continued to drop to-day as the result of the boycott.

$100,000 PLOT TO SWINDLE

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 28.—Wholesale arests among physicians were declared imminent to-day in connection with the alleged $100,000 plot to defraud life insurance companies, in which John J. Keane, J. T. O'Leary and Patrick J. Needham, agents are in custody. These three were arraigned to-day in police court on charges of conspiring to swindle the Indiana National Life Insurance Company of Indianapolis by insuring physical wrecks. The case was continued.

Many prominent physicians are said to be involved in the case, some of them recently. Dr. William R hards, coroner of Floyd County, Ind., to-day admitted at New Albany, that he has signed the certificates of health for many applicants without having seen them. He did this, he declared, on the request ation of the company's agents that the applicants were all right.

TROLLEY FIGHT BY HYDE PARK

Twenty-five residents of Hyde Park were before the Railroad Commission to-day to oppose plans of the Boston & Providence road to locate in that town. Selectman John J. Johnson said townspeople were almost a unit in objecting to another surface road there. He said:

"The road wants to take fully 1 per cent. of the entire area of the town, and the town would thereby lose at least $500,000 of taxable property."

DELAY ON TICKET BILL.

The House to-day postponed action until next Monday on the bill to curb ticket speculators by prohibiting the sale of tickets for any public amusement elsewhere than on the premises where the amusement is to be given, and prohibiting the sale of a ticket at a price higher than that named on its face. Saunders of Clinton argued that the bill is both useless and unconstitutional.

$50,000 FIRE RUINS HOLYOKE GROCERY PLANT

HOLYOKE, Jan. 28.—One of the worst fires that have occurred in twenty years partially destroyed the wholesale grocery establishment of Lemuel Sears & Company, at Nos. 25-31 Race street, to-day. The loss will exceed $50,000.

The flames had considerable headway when discovered, having burned in the fourth story for fully a half hour before an alarm was sounded. They spread so rapidly that it was necessary to send a general alarm, and the entire fire department was summoned.

The firemen kept the blaze from getting outside the Sears store, but it wrought much havoc there. It destroyed the stock on the fourth, and top floor of the building, and the immense quantity of water poured into the building added to the loss.

The building, which was worth $70,000, contained stock valued at $200,000, all of which was insured. All four floors were stocked with groceries. Water stored in the most of these and filled the cellar. The firemen fought for four hours before they had the flames smothered. They pumped water from the canals.

WIFE GETS DIVORCE ON LIQUOR CHARGE

"I was so destitute, your Honor, that I had to go to bed during the daytime with my three children in order to keep warm. My husband spent his entire salary for liquor and refused to buy fuel." This was part of the story told by Mrs. Jennie W. Harding of Duxbacster in the Suffolk County Divorce Court to-day. She was granted a decree by Judge King. She was also granted custody of her children.

Miss Annie Durgin suffered from nervous shock and fright to-day at the home of F. W. Bridges, No. 42 Claremont avenue, Newton, as a result of a lively experience she had last night with a highwayman who held her up and got away with her pocketbook.

Miss Durgin could give but a vague description of the man. The Newton police are looking for him. The purse contained $3.50, a gold mounted rosary and some cards.

TAX COLLECTOR OF WELLESLEY HELD IN $7,500

Clarence H. Dadman, collector of taxes for the town of Wellesley, to-day pleaded not guilty to the charge of stealing money from that town and was held in $7,500 for the Grand Jury, which will sit in April. The formal arraignment of Dadman took place before Judge Emory Grover in the Dedham District Court. Failing to get bail, Dadman was taken to Dedham jail this afternoon.

Dadman arrived at Dedham at 8.50 a. m. to-day. He came from Boston on the train leaving the South Station at 8.18. He was accompanied by Chief Harry Klugsbury of the Wellesley police and State Officer John H. Scott. Dadman was not handcuffed.

Dadman's arrest followed his admission to the selectmen that he was short in his accounts. He went with them to the office and went over the book with them, indicating a number of instances in which he had collected tax bills without turning the amounts received over to the treasurer of the town. He then voluntarily surrendered to Police Chief Klugsbury and was locked up.

The investigation was due to the report of several taxpayers that receipts which they had given the collector in payment of their taxes had not reached the town treasurer. The custom followed by Dadman and his predecessors was to indorse over the individual checks as received and give them to the treasurer. Casual conversations between the treasurer and taxpayers led to the discovery that some of the checks had not followed the usual routine.

When the selectmen were informed of this they called upon Dadman for an explanation. He promptly admitted that he had made use of some of the funds, indicating the gross amount at about $7,200.

John T. Ryan, clerk of the Board of Selectmen, has been appointed to the collectorship temporarily, and also filed a bond of $50,000. He will assist the accountants in examing the books of the office.

The belief that the town will come out without loss was expressed by Selectman Sweetser, chairman of the board.

Another member of the Board of Selectmen said that Dadman admitted to him that he (Dadman) had used the missing money to cover losses in his business, which, he said, had not been successful of late.

SCHOONER FISKE AGAIN A DERELICT

VINEYARD HAVEN, Jan. 28.—The schooner Henry B. Fiske, which in passing about a week ago probably threw her crew of nine men into a watery grave, has again become a derelict, after grounding on Davis Shoal, while in tow of the revenue cutter Gresham, which picked her up Monday.

BIG AUDIENCE ENJOYS PORTIA AND SHYLOCK

"The Merchant of Venice" was produced at the new Shubert Theatre last night. It was an elaborate presentation from a scenic point of view for the many scenes were massively set. There was again a big audience, a sympathetic and an enthusiastic one.

Julia Marlowe's Portia is one of the best things she does. In contradistinction to her shrewish and fiery tempered Katherine in "The Taming of the Shrew" she is the sweet, the placid, and the wise Portia of tradition, lending to the part the charm of her personality and bringing to the reading of lines which have caused the world to lay their beauty her keen intelligence and pleasing voice. In the judgment scene she made an effective magistrate, and did not suggest a girl in masquerade as do so many Portias.

Sothern brought to the study of "Shylock" the same careful attention to details, the painstaking research and determination to evolve the constant characterization that marks all his classic parts. It is conceivable that Shakespeare did not intend "Shylock" to be much more than a buffoon, a dog who was to be hooted and ruffed for the amusement of actors and audience, and whose whines were soothed for mirth. Yet with his wonderful knowledge of human nature, he put into the mouth of "Shylock" the arguments of a race which has suffered wrongs for fifteen hundred years and made it possible for actors to discover in "Shylock" something more than the snarling and vicious Jew who was to be cheated of his ducats and his daughter for the entertainment of the cruel audiences of the past. Sothern's "Shylock" is vindictive and avaricious, and bears a hatred to Christians which is excusable under the circumstances. He is unsatisfactory and he is not detestable or mean. One can sympathize with him for the loss of his daughter, his money and his pound of flesh.

The other members of the company were all that could be desired.

Dr. Rambord admits that just a few friends had been let into the secret from the first, pledged not to breathe a word of it because the noted contralto wished to avoid publicity as much as possible. All he was willing to tell about the event was that after a brief courtship, but acquaintance of three years, they had made up their minds to run over to New Jersey and engage the services of a justice of the peace.

Prince George Laughs at Banishment Order.

BELGRADE—Former Crown Prince George, who resigned his right of succession and who, because of his radical utterances, was ordered banished from the capital, laughs at the order that he must leave Belgrade. He refuses to leave the capital, and it is thought it would be dangerous to attempt to expel him, as he has many friends among the young officers. After his last rebellious the Cabinet threatened to resign unless his father, King Peter, banished him, and the War Office ordered him to take command of an infantry regiment in an obscure part of the country. The Cabinet is now satisfied with the insertion of a court communique, which states that George must be considered temporarily banished from the court. This is received with ridicule by the people.

GUARD HOME OF BANKER HALL

Chapin street is being guarded by a detail of police. The feeling regarding Hall has rapidly changed from sympathy to one of severe censure, and many of the depositors in the bank are beginning to believe that they may lose a part, if not all, of their money.

There are 6,610 depositors in the closed bank and most of them are French. This colony was worked to a high pitch of excitement to-day when the rumor ran through the streets that the bank would lose something like half a million dollars. There was also a rumor that the bank might not reopen its doors.

President Calvin D. Paige declared that the bank would certainly resume business in due time, but he could not say just when it would be ready for business.

Where is the Money.

A meeting of the trustees of the savings bank was announced for this afternoon, to formulate plans for resuming business. After the meeting it was said an important statement would be made to the public.

The one absorbing question that is being asked on the streets of Southbridge to-day is: "What did Hall do with the money?"

The town of Southbridge is reported ready to ask for a warrant for the arrest of Hall charging the theft of $21,000 of the town funds. It is said the examination of the town books has disclosed a tangled state of affairs and that until this tangle has been straightened out the town boss will not be known.

The experts who are examining the bank's accounts are expected to be ready to make their report to-morrow.

It became known to-day that the town officials discovered last April that Hall's town accounts were tangled. A. L. Wheeler, chairman of the selectmen, said that the selectmen at that time were unable to find two notes, one for $29,000 secured for taxes and the other for $1,000 on Mill street bridge improvements.

Mr. Wheeler said that it was decided at that time not to make the matter known, as it was feared there would be a run on the savings bank.

WOMAN GAVE AWAY OVER 300 BABIES

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 28.—That she had provided homes for more than 300 babies in Los Angeles and that until now none of the supposed "waifees" had been any the wiser, is the testimony of Mrs. C. E. Smith, who furnished Mrs. W. W. Wilson with four children, which the latter tried to palm off several days ago on her husband as quadruplets born to her. Mrs. Smith's story was told in the investigation before Judge Wilbur regarding the parentage of the four children which Mrs. Wilson had adopted over her hero.

CRUELTY PLEA FREES WIFE

"With a razor in his hand my husband rushed at me and said he would cut me to pieces, and then get a wife who was congenial," testified Mrs. Jeannette C. Pierce of Westland avenue, in the Suffolk Divorce Court to-day. She was granted a divorce from her husband, Charles H. Pierce, an Atlantic avenue fish dealer, on the ground of intoxication and cruelty. She was also granted $500 alimony.

"One night my husband came home at midnight in an automobile with a party of people. I was so afraid of him that I locked myself in my room.

"When his guests left, I went to the window and saw that the party consisted of two men, my husband and a woman. When I received my husband after bringing a woman into our home he chased me with a razor.

"I rushed down stairs and collapsed at the bottom. My husband barricaded the doors with furniture that night, but I managed to get in after he went to sleep. I did not go to bed that night or the next. I left him a few days later. He scared me all the time I lived with him."

LIBERALS RUNNING EVEN WITH UNIONISTS IN BRITISH ELECTION

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The political tide, favor which would give them an equal majority over the Unionists, who fell by a number of votes. The chances of such an overwhelming second slight.

The Liberals today gave up the difficult task of attempting to stave off the threatened Nationalist split, which would prove, if not fatal, at least a grave menace to the government program. If the Liberals cannot rely on the Irish votes in the new Parliament the fate of the budget is a matter of conjecture.

The announcement in this paper that William O'Brien, who has a following of half a dozen Irish members, will fight the budget fresh and hard because of its heavy taxes on Irish whiskey, has brought rejoicing to the Unionist leaders and some gloom to the ranks of consternation to their opponents.

O'Brien, however, counts on affiliation with many of the Irishite parties, reborn during the last few months, to defeat the budget by many more members than John Redmond and other leaders in Ireland intend to support the government's position. So confident himself is O'Brien of the success of his tactics, it is said, that he has ordered his followers to vote against the whisky taxes, even if they remain firm. The Irish leader is said to be willing to resign his seat in Parliament if the budget is passed.

There are other complications, however. The Union Socialists, of the type of Hyndman, who are tying their plans to those of the parliament. One of their members, in his address before a Socialist meeting in Pendleton, declared the most important question in the country today was the budget. The Socialists, he said, would vote against the budget if it did not contain provisions for the taxation of land values.

Another complication is the Labor party, which will present candidates in many districts. Its platform includes a demand for the abolition of the House of Lords.

Aside from the budget, the Liberals will appeal to the country on the issue of home rule for Ireland, which they have promised to grant if returned to power. Asquith this afternoon went to the King and asked for a dissolution of Parliament. The request was granted.

The election will begin next week and will last about three weeks. The new Parliament will meet on March 31.

A MYSTERY SOLVED

Eczema Not a Blood Disease—New Remedy for Every Skin Trouble

For years the medical profession has been seeking a cure for Eczema, the most common and most stubborn of skin diseases. Some said it was a blood disease; some said it was the result of indigestion. It remained for one studious chemist to settle beyond any question that eczema is all it forms is a skin disease and related in no way to a disordered condition of the blood. This same chemist experimented with many antiseptic healing and soothing agents, but it was not until he formed the compound Cadum that he at last realized he had given to the world something that would bring relief or cure to millions of sufferers. Cadum ranks today with the great discoveries of the medical world. Its action is so positive that the itching of eczema is stopped immediately. People who have itched and scratched for years find sleep and rest as soon as Cadum is used, and in ordinary cases a complete restoration of the skin to a healthy condition is reached in two or three weeks. The soothing, healing effects of Cadum are almost instantaneous. Cadum is sold at all druggists. Trial box 25c; large box 25c. The small box is sufficient for trial purposes, and may be used not only for eczema in all its forms, but also for hives, pimples, blotches, tetter, itch, acne, herpes, scaly skin, rash, psoriasis, ringworm, chafings, eruptions, sores, scabs, itching piles, scurvy, etc.

GRAFT RUMORS IN LAWRENCE AROUSE CITY

LAWRENCE, Jan. 28.—Never in years has such keen public interest been displayed as today in the investigation which District Attorney Peters and a special session of the Essex County grand jury is to make here next Tuesday into an alleged attempt to bribe members of last year's city government to permit the expulsion of Fire Chief James A. Hanlon.

From well-authenticated rumors, sensational evidence will be given before the grand jury. It is now known that the witnesses who are to appear for the grand jury include several of last year's Board of Aldermen, newspaper men, attorneys and police officers.

Today and yesterday State Police officer Fred P. Dyer was busy serving subpoenas on these men, compelling them to appear before the grand jury here next week.

Alderman Makes Charges.

The whole trouble centres about an attempt made last December to remove Chief Hanlon from office and the charges made by Alderman Xavier Logendre, an Italian member of the board of Aldermen, that certain members of the board offered and actually gave him $1,000 to refrain from voting and on a protest leave the meeting.

Mayor Wolfe called the special meeting of the Aldermen about the middle of last December, when, it is alleged, it was proposed to oust Hanlon, who was appointed by Wolfe last year for three years. The meeting was held, Logendre was present, but refused to leave.

Then came Logendre's sensational charge that an enemy of Hanlon had tried to offer him $1,000 to do nothing to prevent the firing of the chief. He said a man had offered him $1,000. Logendre declared he told the man to come back and that meanwhile he hid his friend, Ernest Dube, in a closet, from which Dube saw the whole transaction and the money pass.

Kidnapping in Plot.

Logendre promptly told Hanlon how he was to go to the meeting, and then, under some pretext step outside where he was to be kidnapped. The next day it is alleged police officials went to Logendre and got the bribe money back. District Attorney Peters was notified, and began to investigate.

It is said that those summoned by State officer Flynn include Mayor White, Fire Chief Hanlon, former Mayor Wolfe, Andre Boron, Woeckel, Maloney, Moss and Miller, Samuel Kress, George B. Smart, Ernest Dube, City Marshal Fox, City Clerk Cornelius J. Corcoran, Police Inspector W. J. Houghton, Assessor Fitz and several newspaper men and lawyers. Of all these none but ally Clerk Corcoran, Andrew J. Minahan and Fred H. Lindh, the latter reporters, would admit that they had received summonse to go before the Grand Jury.

WHITE SLAVE RAID RESULTS IN 6 ARRESTS

Despite the fact that Post Commissioner O'Meara declares that the white slave traffic in Boston is only a myth, Natick policemen raised the roof of four dives and two women and locked up one of them, after a raid which is said to be only being investigated. The raid was in the transactions was actually used in Natick and said to be the policy of the police prosecutor told them.

The alleged white slave queen for some in Hester Dalton. She said her address is Grove of Dover and Hyde Park Avenue streets, Roxbury. Her father is Dalton, city employee. The other persons arrested were Louis Russell of No. 22 Hayes street, Boston; May Dodge of No. 3 Dix Court street, Boston; George Dodson, Lucy Smith and Guy Atwood, of Natick.

Judge Henry C. Mathias presided over the cases. Dodson was seen to come to Natick, arrive, unpack a suitcase and unload. He was then under surveillance. A search warrant from the police officers Pennell, Smith, Chubbuck and Dolan. The girl in a room with three men. She said she had been attacked. Five were all taken to the police station.

They followed the arrests of Miss Dodge and Russell in Natick, and one was seen in possession of Smith and Natick, a Natick grocer.

The girl, for police say, left for the Dodge woman lured her to the east coast street home and there Russell, it is said, would make big money in Natick. She says she had not got a cent up to the time she was arrested.

LETTERS REAL, SAYS EXPERT

Daniel Blake Russell, claimant to the Russell estate in Melrose, is today mourning the loss of one of his backyard friends. George Coburn, who died in Melrose yesterday. Coburn was one of the best to identify the claimant as the son of Don and Russell, who left the $500,000 estate now being contested.

Professor R. S. Davenport, chief handwriter expert for the respondents, was the principal witness for the morning session. He made a sweeping denial of the testimony given by the experts for the claimant. He declared that the letters were real, testified to as forgeries by experts for the claimant, were genuine.

Justice Pierce in the Superior Court today granted a temporary injunction to Messrs. Frederick A. and Louis T. White restraining Patrick J. Mullen of Jamaica Plain, Albert Ammann of Malden and Edwin H. Golden of Everett, from occupying part or all of a piece of property on South street, South Boston, owned by the Whitesides sisters.

It is alleged that Mullen will pay $1 a week in the Tremont Building up to three months ago, when the occupancy was changed to the Golden and Ammann interests for a warranty deed and mortgage for $2,000. The deed, it is said, was executed in Malden and charged to the Mullen interests, but the mortgage was executed in Medford. Mullen came to Boston from Kentucky a few years ago, and has been living with his wife and three months he has been employed as a police officer in Malden.

RENEW FIGHT TO KEEP JOBS

Four policemen dropped from the eligible civil service list of the town of Hyde Park because of confusion in the civil service laws affecting their status have begun a fight which will determine once and for all the standing of hundreds of old men in the service of cities and towns in Massachusetts. A writ of mandamus has been filed by David M. Murray, counsel for Michael J. Maguire, Alphonse Benoit, Timothy McNamara and John J. Burke, asking that the selectmen of Hyde Park be ordered to reinstate these names on the police list.

The foundation rests in the courts alone, and no final decision was ever reached. The fact is that the civil service laws of Massachusetts do not adapt themselves to small towns. Hyde Park, and many like it, have only a few officers, and are not able to be put on the civil service list. At last the Legislature passed a law making it possible for the Civil Service Commission to put the towns under the civil service law, but the supreme Court was divided in favor of the policemen.

PARIS FLOOD LOOTERS SHOT PILFERING DESERTED HOMES

road tunnel. There, following the first collapses, the streets have cracked and opened as if split by earthquakes. At times the ground trembles under the shock of bursting conduits beneath the surface.

From this section the inhabitants have been forced to flee, and there remained this afternoon but a small crowd of the more daring. The Champs Elysees, one of the show places of the premier show city of the world, presented a sorry spectacle.

It was a vast lake in which hundreds of men, in water to their waists in some places, struggled to build walls that would protect Le Petit Palais and Le Grand Palais. The great territory of the entire Champs were swirling and eddying as fresh currents were sent across it by the victorious rivers.

At the Champs de Mars the situation was even worse. At the Place de l'Opera there was no life. The streets were roped off; gendarmes stood guard and elevated so that their fires would not be extinguished; fire engines pumped water from the basement of the famous opera house and the nearby buildings.

The Bois de Boulogne, one of the most famous parks in the world and every day in the normal social season the scene of great throngs and exclusive auto and carriage parades, is submerged.

Louvre in Great Peril.

The menace to the Louvre was increased, for all the efforts of an army of men to raise a dyke. The basement was flooded. Many works of art are stored there. The water rose so fast that it was declared the main galleries must inevitably be inundated, if there is not a quick turn for the better. Many works of art that have been admired by the entire world have been removed to safer places, but it is impossible to transfer all. The same situation prevailed today at the Tuileries. Ten of the bridges across the Seine are closed altogether to traffic and over nearly all of the remainder heavy traffic is prohibited.

The Pont St. Louis, connecting the Ile St. Louis and the Ile de la Cite, is in danger of being swept away. Not a bit of debris was allowed to gather under the arches for fear of the formation of a dam.

Sewers Blowing Up.

Sewers blow up at intervals, shattering the roadways and causing walls to collapse. It was bitterly cold. There is food familiar in the city, typhoid and scarlet fever are reported in all parts of the city and a medical council has been called to stop them.

The water is ten feet deep in the section containing the Law Courts Institute, the fashionable St. Germain district, Chamber of Deputies and Champs de Mars. The walls of the Invalides station are reported as crumbling and at the point of collapsing.

Two big department stores near the St. Lazarre station are in imminent peril of being carried down in a collapse.

Charges brought against M. Lepine, prefect of the city, by the City Council, that he is withholding the real gravity of the situation, increased the excitement today.

No Americans Hurt.

No Americans are reported injured. The artists and students for the most part live in the Latin quarter, which is on high ground, and the richer Americans generally reside in the neighborhood of the Rue de l'Etoile, the highest portion of the city.

The board announced that there were 50,000 cubic meters in the reservoirs, enough for several days—and that therefore there was little fear of a water famine.

Premier Briand declared that persons who hoarded up provisions in the affected places with the intention of reselling them at a big profit would be drastically dealt with.

Paris without gayety is almost beyond imagination, but to-day Paris is as forlorn as the city might ever come to be. The life of the boulevards is suspended save for a few streets. Many of the best known cafes have been forced to close. The theatres make but a pretense of keeping open. The shops are crippled, few of their employes can reach them and still fewer customers brave the flooded streets.

Gayety Near Roof Tops.

In the Latin quarter there is sorrow and gayety combined. Compelled, except for a few hardy souls, to live cooped in the upper floors of their buildings, the students make the best of it and hold feasts such as have not been seen since the days of the siege.

There is no jollity in the outlying regions, however. Thousands there are cramped in camps that give little shelter; there are still many who have not been rescued from their isolated homes. As fast as the authorities can save them, fresh encroachments by the water increase the number.

The tourist quarters, though, are among the safest in the city, and there is no anxiety felt for the safety of American visitors. Some of the members of the permanent American colony have been seriously inconvenienced, but there is slight danger for them except for a few rising near the river.

A visit to the river bank has become part of the daily routine of hundreds of thousands in all ranks. Well on half a million people were on the quays to-day. The report that a fall in the river might be expected to-day served to increase the throngs, for everyone who was able to leave quarters hurried to or among those to see the first change.

Fight to Save Palace.

Exceptional efforts to protect the Elysee Palace, the President's residence, as well as other famous buildings, including the Louvre, were continued unabated to-day and dykes and barricades were thrown up at every threatened point.

The railroads are making every effort to get their lines working.

Municipal Councillor Evain, today made a plea that relief sent to France consist principally of supplies and clothes for women and children as well as furniture. This request was made in answer to a dispatch from America, saying that a special relief would be sent from there with material aid.

FEARFUL STORM STREWS WRECKS ALONG THE COAST

HAVRE, Jan. 28.—The western coast of Europe for hundreds of miles is again being swept by a horrific storm for the second time in less than a week. Reports of its effects began arriving to-day. They tell of great probable loss of life especially among the fishing fleets and the destruction of several vessels. The weather has continued severe without abatement along the Spanish and Portuguese coasts, where the losses have been exceptionally heavy.

CABLE SERVICE IS CRIPPLED BY STORM AND FLOOD

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Storm and flood have crippled the cable service to almost every country in Europe. The Atlantic companies to-day sent out notices saying that the lines to France were in bad shape. Warnings of delay in the service with Italy, Switzerland, France, England, Ireland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Russia were given by the Commercial Company's office.

RUIN THROUGHOUT ITALY; MANY CITIES CUT OFF BY STORM

TURIN, Jan. 28.—Italy is in the grip of one of the worst storms of the last decade. Snow is general, falling in localities where it seldom sees. Rain, hail and high winds have done great damage, and every stream is flooded.

For two days Genoa has been almost cut off entirely from the world while the storm raged about it. But one or two telegraph wires are working, and railroad service is crippled. Much damage has been done in the port, vessels being driven into collision or ashore.

A tempest is raging at Florence. Trees and telegraph poles have been torn from the earth, windows blown in and roofs torn from the houses.

The Arno has passed beyond its banks and towns and villages are flooded and cut off from the world. The extent of the damage can only be surmised, because all wire communication in a large district is destroyed, the roads are impassable and no boat can live on the river.

Snow has fallen without cessation for two days at Milan and traffic is tied up. At Cuneo and in the vicinity dangerous has been swept away and thousands of head of livestock drowned. Advices came in slowly to-day, and not till the storm is past will it be possible to begin an adequate estimation of the damage. Great anxiety is felt for smaller towns.

PUNISHMENT FOR SINS, SAYS POPE, OF PARIS

ROME, Jan. 28.—Pope Pius X deeply grieved at the calamity in Paris, and his physicians fear that the worry will have a bad effect on his health. He has followed every development of the disaster closely, surveying continually On Friday after a sleepless night to-day he went to his chapel to pray for the stricken city.

"My poor, erring children," he said to his secretary. "This is punishment indeed for their sins."

Although the wave against the church in France has been bitter since the expulsion of the orders, the Pope was among the first to give money for the relief of the sufferers, sending a large sum to the Archbishop of Paris.

The priests and prelates in France will make special efforts to do all in human power to alleviate the distress. To-day each report on the progress of the flood or its recession and every detail of the situation in the devastated districts was taken to the pontiff with all possible dispatch. When news of the fall of the Seine reached the Vatican the Pope became jubilant and retired to his private prayer. Physically he shows the strain of the last week's worry over the French disasters, but insists on keeping in touch with every angle of the news.

"DIE WITH ME," SAID SUICIDE TO WOMAN

OSSINING, N. Y., Jan. 28. "If you do not meet me and die with me, I will kill myself alone." This was the message Frederick Trippe, a rich real estate broker, sent to Mrs. Edna Schuyler of No. 360 Manhattan avenue, New York, before he killed himself in a lonely farmhouse near Ossining, according to a report here. Miss Roberts, sister of Mrs. Schuyler, was in the house when Trippe shot himself. He lived for two days and it was not until his death that notification of the tragedy was given.

CHURCH PENALTY FOR SALOONISTS

INDIANAPOLIS Jan. 28.—The plan of punishing saloon keepers who violate the law by continuing their business to attend church and suspending their licenses till they bring letters from ministers saying that they have attended, was put into effect here to-day by Mayor Shank, and next Sunday three saloon keepers will go to the church under his sentence.

In the meantime they will not be permitted to open their saloons under penalty of having them raided as blind tigers. There have been twelve arrests for liquor law violations since Mayor Shank took office, and in every case he has suspended the license of the offender for a longer or shorter period.

SHOE ADVANCE IN THE QUAKER CITY

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 28.—Advances in the price of shoes, the result, it is held, of increases in the cost of materials, have been decided on by leading Philadelphia manufacturers, it was learned here to-day. Advances of more than 10 per cent. in the wholesale price have been made, but it is asserted that the continuing increase in cost of materials will mean additions even to the new prices.

WALL STREET WON'T GIVE UP TO G. O. P.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The Republican National Committee also has a way to assist the Republican Congressional Committee with funds, and it became known to-day that Postmaster-General Hitchcock, former Chairman of the National Committee and still its actual head, went to New York to see what could be done. He returned empty-handed, having been told that the anti-trust program of the administration would not open Wall Street pocketbooks.

IRISH CLUBS TO ASK TAFT TO CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—At a meeting of the Irish fellowship clubs in the La Salle hotel, it was decided to make an effort to induce President Taft to speak at the Clan-na-Gael, St. Patrick's day celebration. At a meeting next week a committee will be appointed to extend an invitation to the President.

FAVOR SALARY INCREASES.

MINISTER SUED BY MAYOR WOODS IN LIBEL CASE

REV. EBEN BAYLIS

K. OF L. KEEPS OUT OF MEAT AGITATION

Following a two-hour discussion of the meat problem by the delegates of District Assembly No. 26, Knights of Labor, last night, it was said by the officers to-day that the 5,000 men connected with the assembly would not be requested to refrain from eating meat as a rebuke to the trust. The general opinion of the delegates was that their resolution a year ago, in which Congress was petitioned to act in the matter, fully covered the subject.

WORK BEGUN ON THE FACTORY CENSUS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The United States census bureau has begun the federal census of manufactures, mines, quarries, petroleum and natural gas for 1909, which comprises two of the principal features of the thirteenth decennial census, the others being population and agriculture. The census is being taken under the supervision of William M. Steuart, chief statistician for manufactures, and about 1,500 special agents will be employed in the work.

FIRST VOLUNTEER OF 1861 IS DEAD

WORCESTER, Jan. 28.—The man who was the first to answer Lincoln's call for troops on April 15, 1861, is dead at the Worcester City Hospital. Simeon C. Wilder, seventy years old, enlisted in D Company, Third Massachusetts, at 7:30 o'clock on April 15. The call for the first 75,000 volunteers reached the country half an hour before that.

PEACE IN GREECE IS; LEAGUE IN PIECES

ATHENS, Jan. 28.—The King and his ministers to-day agreed to summon a national assembly on condition that the despotic military league be dissolved. This brings into view the end of the long political struggle which has riven Greece, threatening the fall of King George and leading to the naval mutiny. Radical changes in the constitution are promised if the league abdicates. The new elections will have a great effect on the formation of the new cabinet.

There was an amicable settlement of the difficulty through a conference between Business Agent J. W. Barton of Electrical Workers' Union 104 and the employer.

PRATT DENIES HE THREATENED MAYOR WOODS

George H. Pratt, editor of the Somerville Sun and defendant in the criminal libel suit now being tried in East Cambridge, to-day told from the witness stand his reasons for attacking Mayor John M. Woods and opposing his administration.

Pratt testified that J. F. L. McLean, one of Mayor Woods's campaign managers, came to his office twice and asked him why he opposed the administration. He said:

"I told McLean that I thought Woods was not the right kind of a man for Mayor. Mr. McLean differed from me and said that if the Sun would support the administration we would be treated fairly and would receive a share of the city business.

"I told Mr. McLean this made no difference with me. I was not after city business and cared nothing about it.

"In a second interview with Mr. McLean I told him that I thought Foster was a better candidate, and came more McLean asked me to support the Mayor. At the same time he complained of an article which had appeared in the Sun and told me that it had nearly broken up his home. I told him that I was sorry that it had so happened and assured him that it wouldn't happen again."

Attorney Kelley then asked the witness if he had said that he would follow Woods to the finish, and would watch him right through the year. He denied this and stated that Attorney-General Bonnell then asked if the articles in the Sun were published for any other purpose than for public benefit. The question was objected to and overruled by Judge Bond. He was finally allowed to say that he had no spirit or spirit of revenge towards Woods.

The taking of evidence ended at 1 p. m. when Pratt left the witness stand. A number of rulings were taken and when counsel concerned arguments were heard, the case will go to the jury to-night.

Smith, a Storrow worker, in Ward 6 on election day. Warrants had been issued for the men, and they surrendered to Assistant District Attorney Speelman after Frank Dudley of the Joy street police court had signed complaints. Both were furnished for the accused men by Patrick J. McNally.

SICK HEADACHE

A WARNING THAT SOMETHING IS WRONG WITH THE SYSTEM.

Building up the Health of the Whole Body Will Generally Cure It.

Sick headache is one of the provisions by which nature gives timely and definite warning that there is something wrong with the health of the body. Its exciting causes are varied and numerous. The stomach may be out of order, the bowels sluggish, the nerves fatigued or overtaxed, the body tired out or jagged by loss of sleep, overwork, grief, worry, excitement, or poisoned by impure air or improper food. Weakness in women is also a common cause. These conditions, which seriously affect the general health of the body and fill the blood with poisons, are first announced by a headache. The treatment of sick headache then does not call for a drug which simply deadens the pain but for a medicine which will remove the more serious trouble which causes it. This can best be done through the blood with the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The pills enable the blood to take up added oxygen and so cleanse it of all impurities and make it rich and red. In doing this they restore the strength and health of the entire body and not only give permanent relief from headache but cure the more serious trouble which is the cause.

Miss E. M. Ridley, of No. 29 Amherst street, Belmidale, Mass., was cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills after years of suffering. She describes her case as follows:

"For ten years I suffered from headaches which began when I was a young girl. I would have a dull headache in the morning which would become worse, I moved around. At times I would be so severe that I would have to lie down. My general health was affected and I was dizzy a great deal of the time.

"I tried many kinds of headache remedies, but they only relieved the pain for a time. Finally I heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and gave them a trial. I could see that they were helping me while on the first box. The spells did not last so long and finally stopped altogether. I take this reason I recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills very highly."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Mrs. Nation finally made a gesticulation similar to the movement one might describe in throwing a fastball. SLEET STORM RACING NORTH

A rain, snow and sleet storm is due in Boston to-morrow, according to the weather man on top of the Federal building.

The storm started early to-day down South in Georgia. It was last reported over Alabama and was moving in a northeastward direction. The weather charts at Washington promptly send storm warnings along the Gulf and Atlantic coasts.

SIX CHILDREN FATALLY HURT

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 28.—A bus load of children on their way to school was struck by a train going forty-five miles an hour at Andover, O., to-day. All were injured, six probably fatally.

The engine whirled the vehicle thirty yards from the track.

THE SUNDAY AMERICAN is the Seventh Day Wonder of New England.

BEAUTY! JUST BUNCHES OF IT AT THIS DANCE

There's only one line of talk along the counters at Thompson's Spa to-day—the gorgeous success of the annual dance of the Heptades, which is composed of the girls who wait on the counters there.

You know those pretty girls at Thompson's? They would make a beef boycotter order meat before he knew it. They are like the Sultan's Forty Wives for distracting looks.

Imagine how nice they looked at the dance in Howe Hall, all dolled up in their light dresses, many of their toilettes being quite elaborate.

All Dance Programs Full.

The customers and other friends of the girls were there in full force. They were eagerly attentive to their fair hostesses. As the girls wait on them every day at the lunch counters it was only right that the men should dance gallant attendance on the girls once a year at least. So every girl had more requests for dances than the dance orders could possibly accommodate.

The dance committee introduced one original feature which was a tremendous hit. It came when the Blue Danube waltz was played. The hall was darkened. On a stereopticon screen pictures were shown of young couples courting in the shade of the old apple tree or in the light of the silvery moon or similar suitable setting. The pictures gave rise to many smiles and blushes. But the darkness hid the blushes, of course.

Some Handsome Gowns.

Handsome gowns were worn by the young women. Miss Frances Caldwell of the committee wore brussels net over satin, with pearl garniture; Miss Anna Coughlan, white chiffon with rich hand embroidered corsage; Miss Anna Powers, pale blue chiffon over silk, with silver beaded garniture, and Miss Tina Pringle, lavender chiffon en train, over silk.

Among others that disguised particularly charming gowns were Miss Mary Cahilly, black jet over black silk, semi-decollete, with jet garniture.

Miss Elizabeth Sachs, lavender silk of an exquisite sheen.

Miss Irene Anderson, old-rose silk with ribbon garniture to match.

Miss Lillian Frederick, pale-blue satin, directoire style.

Mrs. James T. Sullivan, pearl-gray satin, gold beaded garniture.

Miss Mary Shurin, pale-blue crepe de chine with Irish lace insertion.

Miss Ella Moore, salmon-pink peau de soie, black piping, yoke of Irish crochet, garniture of violets.

Mrs. Thomas A. McQuade, crushed strawberry china silk.

Others Who Were There.

Other girls present included Tena McDonald, Nettie Mcdonald, May McCall, Annie Thompson, Elizabeth Burdette, Rosie Barker, Elizabeth Lynch, Annie Hill, Jennie Smith, Mary Powers, Molly Lally, Miss Lewis, Peggy Wyatt, Helen Cahill, Belle Mcisaacs, E. Dorothy Grant, L. Ellias, Mary Slavich, Vivian Hill, Marie Ehrenmann, Elizabeth Morgan, Elsie Shaughnessy, Elizabeth Davis, Agnes Mckeague, Catherine Mckue, Mary Cowan, Lettie Lake, Mary Sullivan, C. Hunt, Mary Grivers, Margaret Morrison, Minnie Jeffreys, May Fuller, Grace M. Noble, Nettie Mcdonald, Lorna Lee, Annas M. Cuteney and Katherine Murphy.

BURGLARS TAKEN WITH NO POLICE AID

The three burglars who were captured yesterday while looting the store of Edward Kakas & Sons, furriers, No. 364 Boylston street, were secured by Officers Kilday and Proctor of the American District Telegraph Company, installed by the police. These officers arrived at the store eleven minutes after the burglar alarm sounded at the telegraph company's office. They captured three of the five men engaged in the robbery. Later they turned their captives over to the police. Yesterday's accounts of the affair said that the police and the telegraph company's officers arrived at the store simultaneously.

STUDENT NOT MISSING.

The report circulated yesterday that J. Silas Reed, a wealthy Harvard senior, was missing, is denied to-day by relatives of the youth and the officials at the college. Colonel Edward Burr of the United States engineer's office, uncle of the young man, declared to-day that Reed was taking a few days' vacation, and that he would return shortly.

PRIMA DONNA WHO MAY RETURN TO THE STAGE

FOUR PETITIONS FOR NEW LEGISLATION

Four petitions for new legislation, filed after the expiration of the time limit for filing new bills, were admitted by the House of Representatives to-day on recommendation of the Committee on Rules. The petitions are: Of Mayor Lothrop of Springfield, for the creation of a building department for that city; of W. S. Walker, to provide that dogs shall be kept only on the premises for which their licenses are issued; of Joseph Welch, to permit a city or town to tax property within its own limits which is owned by another city or town; of William J. Callahan, to pay Lalin Thayer, a resident of the Cape, $500 for injuries to her property by the State militia in the war maneuvres last summer.

CORPORATION LAWS LAME, SAYS NAGEL

BALTIMORE, Jan. 28.—At the annual banquet of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association at the Hotel Rennert Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel said that the organization of corporations under State laws was well enough years ago, but to-day there was a conflict in that corporations large enough, to go beyond State lines were not accountable to the federal government. He said that the national government was in the anomalous position of seeking trade with foreign nations and being compelled to stand sponsor for State organizations over which it has no control whatever.

NEW HAVEN WAGE CONFERENCE FIXED

The demand recently made by the 20,000 shop and mechanical tradesmen employed by the New Haven road for a straight eight-hour day and 20 per cent. increase in wages will shortly be taken up by a joint committee representing the road and the unions, in an attempt to avoid any trouble. This was announced to-day at the union headquarters. The men are acting through the Federated Council of that system, in which every shop and mechanical trade union along the line from Boston to the Harlem River is represented. May 1 is the date set for their demands to become operative.

GROCER IN BANKRUPTCY.

Luigi Poto, a grocer at No. 37 North square, to-day filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, stating that his liabilities are $11,092.56 and his assets $10,156. He says that $9,250 of his assets is what is owed him by customers; that their failure to pay their bills caused his bankruptcy.

OLIVE CELESTE TO SING WITH BOSTON OPERA

Lovers of music and the many admirers of Miss Olive Celeste Moore, now Mrs. Archibald S. White of New York and Cincinnati, were delighted to learn to-day that she is probably to return to the stage and make her debut in Boston in grand opera. Years ago, before her marriage to Archibald S. White, a well-known financier, she was popular here as a member of the Boston Ideal and other light opera companies under her stage name of Olive Celeste.

That Mrs. White has received an offer from Henry Russell of the Boston Opera Company became known here to-day for the first time.

"It is true," said Mrs. White to-day in New York, "that Mr. Russell has asked me to join the Boston Opera Company, and I have now the matter under consideration. I had planned to go to Paris and resume my study for grand opera with Dr. Frank Dossert at the new American Conservatory, but I am undecided as to what I will do."

Miss Moore was married to Mr. White in 1905. Noted for her brunette beauty, she had created a sensation when she appeared in "The Red Feather," Reginald de Koven's opera, in 1903. Two years later, when she became Mrs. White, she went to live with her husband at No. 45 East Forty-ninth street, New York. They also have a fine country home in the Adirondacks.

Mr. White is the head of the firm of White & Co., New York. He is a director in the Windsor Trust Company and about twenty-five other large corporations in New York, Cincinnati, Cleveland and other cities. He was the organizer of the National Salt Company, but he got out of it before it failed.

SIENKIEWICZ of "Quo Vadis" fame, has a new story in the SUNDAY AMERICAN.

CARPENTERS TO VOTE ON A WAGE SCALE

Five thousand union carpenters in Greater Boston to-day were requested by the Carpenters' District Council to decide by vote of their local unions whether the wage scale for the next season shall be increased to 50 cents an hour or allowed to remain at the present rate of 47½ cents for still another year. The request for a direct vote on the question was formulated at the council meeting last night, and to-day was sent to the twenty-eight local unions that go to make up that organization. The existing scale does not run out until June 1 next.

ALL METAL WORKERS BUT 4 ARE WORKING

As an indication of prosperity John F. Kennedy, former member of the Finance Commission and business agent for the Sheet Metal Workers' Union, to-day announced that but four members of this union are idle. The membership of the organization numbers 100. These conditions exist in spite of the fact that wages in the union have been increased to $3.75 a day.

MOTOR BOAT SHOW NEAR END

Every day at the Mechanics building sees the usual large attendance of motor boat enthusiasts present. A feature of the show, which will close to-morrow evening, is the absence of "freaks." Everything is practicable and built for actual use. Another point this year will will undoubtedly stimulate the interest in motor boating is the tendency to bring prices within the reach of everyone. Never before have so many moderate priced boats been shown.

In the speedier boats the mechanical secrets are open to all, the makers following the custom of the auto manufacturers in efforts to simplify their product so the owner can operate his own boat with no expert knowledge.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

TEN DAYS LEFT TO SEE COMET

Ten days remain in which to observe the lines comet, which suddenly appeared before the astronomical footlights recently. The astronomers have been swapping computations and have concluded that "Comet A," as they call it professionally, is hitting up a pace that will take it some 180,000,000 miles away from the earth by the end of January.

According to the orbit tables compiled by Professor Kobold of Kiel, Germany, the comet came pretty close to the sun January 17. There were then only about 4,000,000 miles separating them. For about a week now the comet will be visible to the naked eye in the West after sunset, growing fainter each evening.

It would take a whole page in this paper to explain to you why Scott's Emulsion is such a wonderful help in curing consumption. The fact is simple, for it's simply a case of strength, more strength and more strength. Every dose of the emulsion adds strength. Soon the losing of flesh and strength is stopped. Then, soon there is more strength than necessary for ordinary work and the surplus goes to driving out the disease.

Keeping on adding strength; nothing does it so quickly and surely as Scott's Emulsion. Keep on taking the Emulsion and get all the sunlight and fresh air you can.

'L' MANAGEMENT TRIES TO EXPLAIN ITS DUDLEY ST. TERMINAL PUZZLE

The Boston Elevated Railroad has issued a statement in explanation of the frightful conditions that prevail at the Dudley street station during the rush hours. The company says that it keeps twenty-three men there to tell people where they want to go. The fact that it takes that many men for the job, patrons say, proves that conditions at this station should be improved.

In the course of their long statement the company says:

Dudley street is a very large station. The company is endeavoring to give uninterrupted service while structural work is being made to change the present surface arrangements and to build an elevated station. If a single hour's traffic from this station be doubled the present facilities are overtaxed to accommodate the passengers to go from one platform to another. In order to provide for transference it is necessary to use six different platforms north and south on two levels.

More "Improvements" to Come!

Moreover, in the next place the changes are far from complete on the east loop of the upper level as work is elsewhere. When they are finished the conditions will be greatly improved, both by the provision of larger waiting room and shorter distances for passengers to go in changing from one car to another.

The company cannot enlarge its facilities and provide ample room for such enlarged facilities without meeting conditions which will involve some interim annoyance of service. The assertion that the increasing thousands can be accommodated without increasing the extent of the areas over which they move in the same period which the Main line has thought he could have his pie and eat it, too.

The company welcomes for adoption feasible suggestions for improving conditions, but, of course, derisive and unintelligent comments upon a decision to make almost entirely convenient and serviceable do not help it.

Many Have to Pay Two Fares.

The statement also tries to explain the puzzling system of turnstiles, by which the unwary traveler is actually lured to pass through to a space under the stairs to the board his car, but finds himself barred from the trolley by turnstiles that don't work his way. So he pays another fare.

The Elevated admits that it has tried to perfect a system to stop passengers returning in the opposite direction, but it is a fact that these gates and turnstiles are far too complex to be secured by the public without a course of study in advance.

They never will be, more's the pity, perhaps elsewhere, a station which was so much of a problem to the hurrying public.

The Elevated statement says there are frequent signs and officials to direct people. It is a fact that the signs are such a puzzle as the intricate passages, several platforms and numerous stairways. The men who were stationed in the passage from the Forest Hills L while all was chaos in the first days of the opening of the new line are not in evidence now. It was bad enough when hundreds and thousands were compelled to stop and ask the tongue-wearied attendants where to go, but now one can only guess from the study of those signs.

The Dudley terminal may be a work of art, but it will never be a joy forever to the people of Boston.

HAMMERSTEIN TO BRING NOVELTIES

All the novelties produced at the Manhattan Opera House during the season will be given in Boston during the engagement at the Boston Theatre of the Hammerstein company for two weeks, beginning Easter Monday, March 28, including Massenet's "Griselidis" and Sophie Brandt's "Sapho," done in the title roles; Strauss's latest opera, "Elektra," which will be given for the first time in America next week at the Manhattan, and Massenet's "Thais," Leoncavallo's "Zaza," "The Juggler of Notre Dame," "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame," and "Pelleas and Melisande" will also be given with Miss Garden. Tetrazzini will be heard with John McCormack, the Irish tenor, in "Lucia," "Traviata" and "The Daughter of the Regiment." "Tales of Hoffmann" and "Don Giovanni" may also be given.

HELD IN $20,000 ON SHOOTING CHARGE

Bail was fixed at $20,000 by Judge Bernard in the Brighton District Court today when John Maddigan waived examination and was held for the Grand Jury on the charge of assaulting with intent to kill Edward Brunsfield, who is now at City Hospital with a bullet in the abdomen. Maddigan and Brunsfield lived in the same boarding house at No. 180 North Beacon street, Brighton. The shooting occurred Thursday afternoon, and is said to be the result of a quarrel. Brunsfield's condition is serious.

Acid Dyspepsia

Nervous People Are Frequent Sufferers From Too Much Hydrochloric Acid in the Stomach.

▲ Trial Package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Sent Free.

"Sour stomach," or acid dyspepsia is a form of indigestion in which entirely too much hydrochloric acid is secreted by the stomach. A sour taste in the mouth is the most common symptom of acid dyspepsia, and the saliva, which is normally alkaline, is found, when tested, to be changed to acid, or just the opposite of what it should be, and is a state of the secretion which causes rapid and extensive destruction of the teeth.

Everything eaten turns more or less sour in the stomach, but sweets and acid fruits are far worse in this respect than other foods. If the erucation of liquids from the stomach occurs, they have such an extremely sour taste as to set the teeth on edge.

Hydrochloric acid is an important constituent in the gastric juice, but when too much of it is secreted it does positive harm to the mucous lining of the stomach, and when acid dyspepsia is long continued is often sets up chronic gastritis, gastric ulcer and other serious diseases. The premature loss of all the teeth has been caused by acid saliva, which was dependent upon the excessively acid condition of the stomach.

STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS, besides furnishing pure, aseptic pepsin to the stomach to dilute the excess of hydrochloric acid and to digest proteids and albuminous foods very thoroughly, also contain bismuth subnitrate and calcium carbonate, which are antagonistic to the acid, and therefore neutralize the effect of the excessive amount of acid in the stomach, and the continued use of these tablets will change the perverted condition of the secretions to a normal state.

If you are suffering from "hyperchlorhydria," as physicians term it, or, in other words, acid dyspepsia, and experience a sour taste in the mouth, with acid eructations or heartburn begin at once the use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, using one or two after each meal, or as may be required, and the same quantity at retiring time, for if this trouble is allowed to run on it may cause serious organic changes in the stomach. There are cases on record where the lining of the stomach has been completely eaten away through perverted action of the secretions.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been tried in all forms of indigestion and dyspepsia, with unfailing success, so that no matter which form you may be suffering from, the quickest way to bring about a cure is through the use of these powerful stomach tablets.

Secure from your druggist a fifty cent box, and get cured of acid dyspepsia, or whatever form of indigestion you may be suffering. Also send us your name and address for free sample. Address F. A. Stuart Company, 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

DEATH NOTE IS BARRED AT GIRL'S TRIAL

WATERBURY, Ct., Jan. 28.—The defence scored a telling point in the trial of Sophie Kritchman, charged with murder, in Judge Prentice Kellogg's Union City, last September, when the court decided to admit as the declaration of the dying man a blood-smeared piece of paper offered by the prosecution which it is alleged the man wrote while lying in the woods.

The writing on the paper was in Lithuanian and on one side read "Sofe shot me," and on the other "Sophie Kritchman. It seems I must die a death at your hands at two after dinner me Kid. Because was shot. But no brother I for Ike."

The piece of paper the victim's brother claims to have found near where the body was lying.

The gist was put on the stand for the next time to contradict the testimony of Kritchman's brother, who is said to have found the paper.

She was self possessed and gave her answers in a clear, bold voice. She showed the first signs of nervousness since the trial began when Anton Kritchman was testifying.

TAFT YIELDS TO DEMANDS OF INSURGENTS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—That the insurgents in Congress are the men who are really directing the course of President Taft's legislation became known to-day when it was learned from a high source that modifications have been made in the administration anti-trust bill as a result of indirect opposition to the measure from another indication of the trend of affairs found in the Postal Savings Bank bill, which has been whipped into such shape that there is little promise for progressive opposition.

Both of these measures now stand a much better chance of going through this session than they did when the insurgents first opened fire on them when their general proof became known. This spirit of lustle which not only the insurgents share, but the progressive regulars as well, felt to-day to the first session of the Senate on Friday. The policy of the Senate leaders so far has been to make all delay possible, according to astute politicians.

The knowledge that a faction is ready to see that the administration program, with all its large steps, gets a hearing led to the session to-day lasted only a fifteen-day to-Monday adjournment, as has more before been the rule.

Legal Stamps Are Best

This should be your dominant thought in collecting stamps of any kind: "Are they safe?" "Will I get what is coming to me out of them?" These are questions every man or woman should ask before committing himself or herself to trading stamps. With Legal Stamps you are absolutely safe because of the following reasons:

First Reason: You have the Merchants' Legal Stamp Company's word backed up by its five years of faithful performance for the redemption of every stamp ever put out—and during those six years over $2,500,000 have been put back into the hands of the people for the redemption of Legal Stamps.

Second Reason: You don't have to wait until you fill a whole book with "Legals" to satisfy you of their security. From the very moment you start to collect them you can get them redeemed at the rate of twenty cents a hundred or $2.00 when your book is filled.

Third Reason: Every Legal Stamp is good. This applies to every issue from the very first one the company made in 1904 when it first started business, down to the present moment. What is more, you can get the cash in hand and do with it that which best suits your own convenience.

Fourth Reason: You have the whole say as to what you shall get for the stamps in your book. You can redeem selected $2.50 worth of any merchandise you wish in our whole store at our regular cash competitive prices—trade us for $2.00 in cash and get it.

As these dates may conflict with games already scheduled for the St. Nicholas rink, there may have to be a change of dates.

DRISCOLL TO MEET ATTELL FOR THE TITLE

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 28.—That arrangements were perfected whereby the battle for the featherweight championship of the world, between Jim Driscoll of England and Abe Attell of America, will take place in a few weeks is assured by a cable received here from J. W. Coffroth the big fight promoter, who is abroad, and has had a conference with Driscoll and got his agreement to come to America to fight Attell.

As Coffroth intimated that he would start for home at once, it is presumed that the fight will be held some time next month for the club in which he is interested has received a permit, and the only thing needed now is a good attraction.

JIMMY MORAN TO RACE COLLINS

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—When Jimmy Moran meets Elmer Collins in the ten mile motor paced race at the bicycle sprint meet in the First Regiment armory at Newark, February 5, which precedes the six-day race, he will endeavor to regain some of the laurels he was deprived of last season, when, through an accident at Clifton, he was prevented from finishing up the season and was obliged to see the motor paced championship go to Collins. Moran, while not begrudging Collins his honors, has always contended that he was just getting into his old time form when the fall put him in the hospital and out of the game for the year.

BEST PUGILISTS WERE FLAT-FOOTED FIGHTERS

By TAD.

Jim Corbett and Billy Madden are having quite a little fun these days regarding flat-footed fighters. Corbett is the one good man ever fought flat-footed. Corbett himself fought on his toes; he was a dancing, jabbing heavyweight, but if Jim will only go back a moment he will discover that Madden is right when he says that the world's greatest fighters were flat-footed.

Fitzsimmons, who knocked out Corbett, was as flat-footed a fighter as the world ever saw. The power behind his punch was helped on by this peculiarity.

Do you think for a moment that Fitz could have jolted with that mule kick slam if he had been up on his toes? Can any man in the world deliver a hard punch on his toes?

Johnson Flat on His Feet.

Corbett declares that Johnson, who fights flat-footed, comes in a good boxer. Stronger again, Jim, when you figure that Battling Nelson, Joe Gans, Stanley Ketchel and all of our best fighters are flat-footed.

Jeff is flat-footed, and so are the others. Can you picture the big fellow carrying 250 pounds up on his toes?

Why, Jeff free himself out in three rounds if he ever tried it. Young Griffo acknowledged by good judges to be the cleverest man in the world at that time, was not a dancer. Griffo fought with his heels flat. It wasn't a trick at all for him to stand in the centre of the ring with his hands at his sides and let the other fellow break his neck trying to land.

Griffo's head did the work. He seldom moved out of range with his feet. He simply pulled his head this or that side and let the punches slide by.

They tell of a time in a saloon when Griffo, standing at the bar, watched a fellow behind him try to knock his hat off. Griffo calmly catched the fellow in the looking glass and as the other swung Griffo just ducked. He made forty-six of time in a saloon that no one could hit him in the face, and he never attempted to strike the other man.

All of this simply goes to show that the feet are not essential to cleverness. Joe Gans won his spurs by his marvelous blocking. He jumped like O'Brien to avoid a punch. He stopped the other fellow by sticking his glove out and stepping the punch.

Jack O'Brien a Toe Dancer.

Jack O'Brien is a toe dancer, but he cannot punch. Jem Driscoll is another, but Jem is no bear at the wallop thing. Of course, the pretty boxers use the toe thing, but the old boy with the slam is planted there on the floor with both feet, and when he slams, HE SLAMS.

If you could punch as hard from the toe position, how is it that the best punchers are all set before they slam? Haven't you heard seconds yell advice from the corner when they fear the other fellow "DON'T LET HIM SET"?

Watch him the other fellow with the kick gets set he's liable to knock the other fellow's block right out into the crowd.

BOUT IN UTAH OR RICKARD FORFEITS $101,000 PURSE

ELY, Nev., Jan. 28.—Jim Jeffries has signed to box in Salt Lake City. This announcement was made by Tex Rickard, the man who is promoting the heavyweight championship battle on July 4 and to back up his word he has made public the contract signed by himself, Sam Berger and Jeffries with the stipulation that the fight is to take place in the Salt Lake City unless the authorities interfere.

If he be the winner that Jeffries signed up when Rickard made known to him what he would do in event that he failed to pull off the fight. If the authorities will not permit the fight to take place in Salt Lake City Rickard is to forfeit the whole purse of $101,000 to the fighters, he to agree to divide it equally between themselves without fighting.

The contract with Jeffries was signed last Monday at Ogden, where Rickard made an engagement for a conference with Jeffries. This action on the part of Rickard is conclusive proof that he is sure that the authorities will allow the business men of Salt Lake City to hold the fight.

UTAH'S GOVERNOR PREPARES EDICT ON BIG FIGHT

SALT LAKE CITY, Jan. 28.—The possibility of holding the battle between Jeffries and Johnson is up in the air so far as the governor's intentions are concerned.

Governor Spry has declined to give out any interview on his attitude in the matter of interfering with the fight but says he will prepare a written statement regarding his position in the matter which he says will be a final disposition of the matter.

JOE WOOD'S CONTRACT IN

Manager Donovan was pleased to-day to receive the signed contract of Pitcher Joe Wood, reputed to be the speediest twirler in the American League. Joe sent no letter saying he was in the pink of condition and anxiously awaiting the signal to start South, but Donovan didn't care anything about that. The signed contract was what he was looking for and he got it.

Wood has been spending the Winter at his father's home in Ness City, Kansas. Last year Joe got a bad start, as he was sent home from Philadelphia the day the championship season started suffering from an injury that hid him up many weeks. He finished the season strong, and this year should prove one of the most valuable pitchers in the American League ranks.

MARTIN BOXES MAINE CHAMP

Several local followers of the boxing game are going to Manchester to-night to see the bout between Tom Furey of Portland and Terry Martin which is scheduled for fifteen rounds at the Queen City A. C. Martin and Furey are considered leaders as any pair of welterweights in the East, and their past contests are assurance that the event to-night will be one of the best seen in that city.

The fans who make the trip will be well repaid for doing so. Then the match between Tom Furey of Attleboro and Kid Sheehan of Boston, who is a brother of Pat Sheehan from Sheehan at the Armory A. A., but the Manchester boy's friends are ready to support their opinions as to his superiority over Furey with real money. Sheehan is the favorite.

As Los Angeles forbids bouts within the city limits, the contest will be held in the suburb of Vernon.

STRAIGHT DOPE
FOR SPORT FANS

HECTOR MINNES, THE SOUTH Boston fight manager, threatens to spring something new in the boxing game. He looks after the interests of Kid Sheehan, the Manchester boy, who is to meet Tommy Forey in that city to-morrow night. Sheehan is deaf, and this infirmity caused him to be counted out in the first round of a bout with Forey at the Armory. Sheehan was knocked down in the first round, and lay on one knee while the referee was counting, expecting to get on his feet again when the referee reached nine. He was in good condition to continue the fray, but his deafness caused him to get tangled in the count, and the "ten" was reached before he knew it. Now he says he will reverse matters by making Forey take the count, but Mr. Minnes is not going to take any chances, and says he will hang an alarm clock to Sheehan's stomach and touch it off before the fatal count is reached.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
There is an editorial in the Springfield Republican of January 26 in regard to the match battle between Jeffries and Johnson. The battle is the most interesting topic of discussion in sporting circles against the boxers have had in the past few years, and it will go down in history as one of the classics. Its date, Quantities of ebullient, fiery ink have been spilled over it, and during the hours less efficient than it now have been absorbed by the thirsty atmosphere.

Now, what do you know about that? I have followed the sporting pages in the papers closely for some time and this is the first time I have ever heard that Jeff was a boxer. Or the guy who wrote that dope might step up with his Ad. Reuben and tell us what he has on the Americus scout has got to be good.

Now, Mr. straight Dope, I would like to know your opinion on this subject, and what you as a good sport, for the game, think. I have been absorbing whiskey by the quart for years as described in that dope paragraph, but I do know when it is wrong. Who is it, "SWEENEY."

Brookline.

It doesn't appear to me that the writer of the editorial was indulging in any loose talk in what he said about Jeff drinking. The trouble is that you did not read it carefully enough, and quite likely carefully enough when you read it. Even Jeff's most partisan admirers, if they know anything about the big fighter's mode of life from the time he quit the ring after the fight with Munroe in August, 1904, up to a little more than a year ago, admit that this period was one of "some years of prosperity and of fairly hard drinking." Jeff has climbed to a high seat on the water wagon, and hasn't even dropped his whip since he decided to fight. He'd be a fool if he did anything else, and Jeff is no fool. He did, however, drink "booze" and plenty of it during that lay-off of several years. As to my opinion being good enough for you, I'm really flattered that you feel that way, but I can only tell you the facts. A bartender can't hand me rye and make me believe its Bourbon, but I've never gone against either of them hard enough to be able to tell just how much they cost a man. And in an effort to recover his old-time punch, I've never known booze to be of any particular benefit to a fighter, with the possible exception of Aurelio Herrera, and he couldn't fight well unless he was half drunk.

He trained on beers and was a great fighter while he lasted, but he didn't last long.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
I am very much worried about Mr. A. Mott and little Jeff being in Paris at the present time. Have you had any word from them.
E. BURNHAM, JR.
Board of Trade, Boston, Mass.

No one need feel any uneasiness about Mutt and Jeff. If you are familiar with the habits of the game plunger and his little pal, you will readily understand that they are in no immediate danger. The districts where Mutt and Jeff are elevating the inhabitants to a proper appreciation of class is the one where the grape flows the reddest and the nerviine is necessary once in a while. This section is as yet unaffected by the flood.

Straight Dope, Boston American:
I have a bet on that Kelly that would like to fight any class at 126 pounds. Tommy Ryan, Abe Attell, Harry Ward or Battling Edwards, any of them. Yours truly, Official

WONDER WHAT PORKY FLYNN would do to a man who would ask him in good faith if he is an Italian and if his name is not Andrew Chirighino? This is liable to happen if a man takes as straight dope one of the entries in Andrew's latest dope book. I remember that it was Porky Flynn who won from Ralph Calloway here in Boston last October, but the dope book says Calloway was defeated in Boston on that date by Jim Flynn (Andrea Chirighino). It was Porky that beat Calloway, all right, all right, but the dope book gives the credit to the Pueblo Breman, who is an Italian.

I didn't see the Delmont-Mackey fight last Friday night, so can't tell you anything more about it than what was printed in the papers.

DRIVING CLUBS MAKE CIRCUIT

At the second meeting of the delegates from the Lynn, Metropolitan, Fellsway, Dorchester, Quincy Point and Old Colony Driving Clubs, which took place in Lynn, it was voted to begin the fortnightly meetings July 9 and following every Saturday, to close on August 20.

Combination Park will be selected to hold the events if possible, otherwise the races will be held over the Reading Wakefield track. At these fortnightly meets there will be ten horses, five trotters and five pacers, from each of the clubs, making a programme of ten races with six horses in each.

Final arrangements will be concluded at another meeting of the delegates at the Quincy House in this city on February 10.

AMATEUR BOXERS PERFORM AT A. A. A.

The amateur boxers will have a chance to show their skill at the Armory A. A. to-night. More than fifty of them have entered in the three open classes. This assures some sport. There will be two preliminaries, Lieut. Thomas will box Eddie Murphy of Dandelion and Dave Powers of Malden will box Harold Eldridge of Whitinsville.

Baseball News and Notes.

Bill Clymer thinks that all a team needs is a good backstop and shortstop.

Hughey Duffy says that the Yankees have secured a mighty clever catcher in Mitchell, and that he will make good as sure as he is given a chance.

Arthur McGraw is pretty sure to be a regular in the Reds outfield this season.

Joe Wood, the former Yankee infielder, now under contract to the Phillies, will not go back to the minors.

It had been reported that he was going to be shipped to Montreal, but when Ed Barrow took to get Joseph, Charley Dooin said no.

Mahoney, a third sacker in a Baltimore city league is going to be given a tryout by the Orioles. Jack Dunn thinks he will make good.

Joe McGinnity may land Mike Mowrey. The Reds is said to be candied for Newark.

There is no chance of Russell Ford, James Cook's ex-Yankee pitcher last year, being with the Senators again. George Stallings made a big mistake when he farmed out Ford in the first place. He should have a real bearcat for the Yanks the coming season.

Catcher Flanagan, the Buffalo outfielder, may hook up with Charley Dooley's Utica team. Manager Billy Smith of the Bisons has a big squad of Groeschers on his staff, and as Flanagan wants to go to Dooley, Smith has asked Eastern League clubs to waive on him.

As Manager Jimmy Kounelis of Troy has decided to cover second hims self next season, Gallivan will probably be farmed home. Kounelis says he has a lot of fine talent in store for the infield.

Rondeau, the crack outfielder of the Milwaukee last season, who was sold to the Red Sox, is going to be farmed back to Jesse Burkett for another year's experience in minor league company.

Walter Barrie fans are thrilled to death with the news that Pitcher Joe Bliss has been farmed back by Detroit.

Heine Batch has been up in Rochester the past few days visiting friends. Batch told the fans up there he was going to give them some grand ball next season.

Letters of a Worldly Mother to Her Son

No. 1—Written as He Is Leaving for a Position in a Big City

By Dorothy Dix

October 1.

My Dear Son—I am leaving this little note on your pin-cushion because I am going out to Mrs. Hamilton's bridge party, and may not be back in time to catch you before you go on to the Elkins dinner dance.

And—er—er—son, to-night it is the light of the moon in which a wise-acre social farmer, such as I am, knows is the best time to sow the seeds of good advice, which is to say that it is the psychological moment in which to hoist a danger flag in your path way.

I got your telephone this morning, saying that the "big offer" from the firm in the city, that you had been looking for had come to you at last. It is what I have hoped and prayed for—and dreaded for you. It gratifies my ambition that your talents have been recognized. It fills me with pride that you will have a chance to prove the mettle that is in you, and my breast palpitates with joy that I have given such a man to the world, but oh, my son, my little boy that was, my big man that he is, the mother heart within me breaks that I am giving you up, and that you are going away from me.

A Mother's Blinding Tears

I would not have you stay, and yet you take the sunshine, for me, with you when you go. I buckle on your armour with my own hands and send you out to fight your battle with the world—but I cannot see the straps, and my hands grope for them, so blinded am I by my tears.

But this was not what I intended to write to you in this letter, which I beg you to believe is marked DRIGHT, and READ WITH CARE.

In a few days, son, you are going where every

Cupid attends the departing youth

house and tree is endeared to you by some tender association. Everybody knows and loves you; everybody is rejoicing in your success, and you will find that your very soul is inundated by a rosy wave of tenderness that makes you see everything through a glamour.

The tumbled down houses will look picturesque to you; cranky people you will call quaint; those that you have disliked you will suddenly feel kindly to, and those that you have been fond of will appear nearer and dearer to you than you have ever dreamed.

My boy, this is one of the most poignant moments in your life, the saddest, most joyous, the sweetest and the most dangerous. Take your mother's advice, and to-night beware of female society, and especially steer clear of all the dear, good little girls that you have known all of your life, as you would if they were man-devouring gorgons with vipers instead of baby blue ribbon in their hair.

A Time of Deadly Peril, Son

Ask Mrs. Elkins to send you down to dinner with the oldest and ugliest woman in the room, and to put you next to some lady who is so old that she cannot hear it thunder. Dance only with wall-flowers. Stick in the room where the brightest electric lights burn, and if you feel yourself bubbling over with sentiment so that you must tell some one that you love her, jump in a cab and come tell it to your mother, for so alone will you achieve safety. Never again, son, as long as you live will you be in such deadly peril.

From a "Seraph" to a Sheriff

Of course you will guess that I am thinking of Helen Gray. I am, and I am thinking also just as much of her as I am of you. When you have been out in the world five years, if you still find her your ideal of womanhood, there is nobody whom I would more gladly welcome as your wife. But you are just starting on your journey, and I want you to go upon it free and unfettered, not bound down by a debt of honor that may become a millstone about your neck. Likewise I want you to leave her free, and not put her in that equivocal position of neither being maid, wife nor widow, but a Walter, who is waiting for some one who may never come back, or only come back upon compulsion.

I know that you are not really in love with Helen, but I am afraid—oh, deadly, deathly afraid—that before you are feeling sentimental and tender at leaving home, and because you are a little lonely at the prospect of being a stranger in a strange city, and because a thousand ties of youth bind you to her, and because she will look sad, and soft and sweet, and kissable in the moonlight when you say good-by to her, that you will say that to her that will make you wish that your tongue had been cut out before ever you uttered it.

It appeals to a young man's gallant and romantic spirit to think that a woman loves him and is waiting for him; and when he is starting away from home before he knows it he has asked some girl to do the patience-on-the-monument act for him. And she does, and at first when he thinks about her she looks to him like a seraph, but this illusion passes, and in time she doesn't look any more like a seraph but like a sheriff, who is waiting to collect the promissory note that he signed while under the influence of the going-away-from-home brand of dope. That's why I entreat you not to drink of that stirrup cup, son.

The man who goes away and takes his part with the city outgrows the girl who stays in the village and waits. The man doesn't know this at first, and he dreams lovely dreams about the modest violet in the country lane that he has left behind him, but when he goes back there is something the matter with the violet. She doesn't know how to do her hair. Her clothes are queer. Her conversation is bread and buttery, and he begins to need foot warmers when he thinks of taking her to the city and introducing her into the society to which he belongs.

But he's got to marry her if he's got one particle of honor, for he has kept her from marrying the prosperous village butcher, and you can't take the tenderloins out of a lady's mouth without substituting chocolate creams for them.

A Mourner at His Own Funeral

I have seen this happen over and over again, son, and it always spelled misery for all concerned. I have known the boys who went away engaged to Mamie and Susie, and who wrote back at first twice a day, then once a day, then every other day, then once a week, and then once a month, and I've seen Mamie and Susie grow old and faded and haggard looking, and sometimes I've mingled my tears with Mamie's and Susie's when the faithless lover didn't come back to make good on his promises, and sometimes I have attended a wedding where all that the bridegroom needed was a wisp of crepe on his hat to give a realistic imitation of being the chief mourner at his own funeral.

Therefore, I entreat you to walk warily to-night, son, and avoid tying the halter around your neck. Wait a year or so. Take a few looks at the city girls first. I'm not saying anything against our village maidens. They are dears and sweets, but after a man acquires a taste for caviar he may not especially relish mush and milk. I'm only reminding you of

YOUR LOVING MOTHER.

The Woman Who Stands

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

SHE got into the Subway at Sumner street during the rush hour.

She wasn't pretty, nor smart, nor very old, nor did she carry a child.

She was just a little foghorn woman, tired body and soul with earning her own living.

She was very short, but she hung to the strap, first by one arm, then by the other, shifting her light weight from one tired foot to the other.

And as she was neither young nor old, nor smart nor pretty, and not carrying a child, no man offered her a seat.

She did not look as though she expected a seat; she was accustomed to being pushed and jostled and shoved aside by men, she was too weary to exert the charm of sex and exact the chivalry due her.

The Saddest of Sights

The saddest sight in the world is a woman who plainly shows that she expects no consideration from men. It shows that she has to push and fight for a living small men regard her as one of themselves and treat her as such.

If woman were physically as strong as man she would not expect care and consideration from him, she would be willing to take her fighting chance with the rest of the world.

But she is not so strong, and the average woman who earns her living uses up every ounce of strength and energy in doing so.

To work all day and then get on the car and be treated with scant courtesy by men, brings smarting tears to a woman's heart and eyes.

A Plea for Longer Straps

To begin with, the hanging straps in subway and elevated trains are made for man's convenience, and are much too high for most women to reach with comfort.

Why can't every third or fourth strap be made long enough to accommodate a woman's short reach?

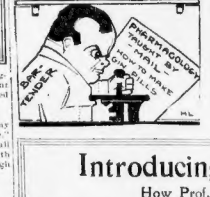
Man joyfully prophesies that when woman votes she no longer will be entitled to man's chivalry and consideration. Well, woman does not vote now, and, in many cases, man's chivalry is conspicuous by its absence. How about that, gentlemen?

I do not mean that men do not show chivalry to any woman; I simply say they do not show it to all women, and there should be no discrimination.

Not one man on earth would allow the Duchess of Marlborough to stand in the street car if he were aware of her title.

But the men who would fall all over themselves in their eagerness to accommodate a duchess with a seat would let a poor little tired working woman stand for miles.

TO-DAY'S BEST STORY



WHEN the physician arrived at the dejected house, he found that his patient was a decrepit negro, who sat up in bed and inquired:

"How much yo' charge, doctuh?"

"Two dollars a visit, which includes mileage, experience, advice and the medicine."

"A poor old coon like me don't need all dem extras; just gib me ten cents' worth o' yo' cough medicine, and dat's enough for me!"

SWINDLED

"He seems to be dissatisfied with his lot."

"Yes. He says it is under ten feet of water."

Tabloid Tides

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

Alcohol is now compressed in tablets and capsules and sold in boxes.—News Item.

AWAY with crystal gleaming bar,
Where once the Demon Rum was wont in glory to abide.
The flowing bowl shall flow no more when men shall come to use,
Instead of cocktails, slings and flips, the new non-fluid booze.
In future they'll embark upon—but time their spirits flag—
An unarrested, drink-divested, predigested jag.

Let brewers weep, the worm has turned, distillers may distill
In vain, when one whole hat can be compressed in one small pill,
A pill which placed upon the tongue will conjure from the air
Two lampposts on the avenue where only one is there.
No sizzling gridiron need supply carbonic on the side—
One nicely gulps a time or two, and gets a tabloid tide.

And poets, how will they survive when not a single line
Of poetry may sing the praise of cau-de-vie or wine?
Were Omar writing recipes for joyous living now
He'd specify "a box of pills, a buckwheat cake and thou,"
And that anonymous old Greek whose verse has lived so long,
Would pen a few well chosen lines on capsules, skirts and song.

So roll away the whiskey keg, destroy the flask and flagon,
For e'en the dipsomaniac is on the tablet wagon.
Cafes may be conducted on a more extended scale,
And patrons at a distance may subscribe for buns by mail!
While underneath the cover of a watchcase may be stored
Enough intoxicants to fill a psychopathic ward.

Introducing the Fine Italian Foot

How Prof. Munsterberg Trapped Mme. Palladino

By CHARLES O. POWER

EXIT the "fine Italian hand," enter the "fine Italian foot."

All on account of Professor Hugo Munsterberg of Harvard and Eusapia Palladino of Sunny Italy. The story of Hugo the Highbrow and Eusapia the Sapient is more than medium, it's entrancing.

Eusapia says she can divert spirits and command them to attend her pink teas without any teasing on her part. Modestly, she avers that she doesn't know how she does it, but she does it. She can talk to and see your sisters and your cousins and your aunts when she holds a grand seance. That's her story.

Professor Hugo doubted and dared her to try it on him. In other words, he challenged her to a joint debate. She took the dare and Professor Hugo arranged the stage-setting for the Palladino sitting.

She sat between the great Munsterberg and an almost-as-great friend. That is, Mr. Carrington is a great friend of the Professor, but he is not as great as an exposer. Munsterberg holds the belt in the champion doubter and show-em-up performer.

What a Fix to Be In!

See the fix Eusapia was in, sitting there between Hugo and his friend. Could she beat them at her own game? Let her try it on. Not at all did she reck or wot or ken that "in man lies flying flat on the floor, and had succeeded in slipping noiselessly like a small snail below the curtain into the cabinet."

Ah, there was a man living on the floor. He was lying before poor Eusapia had begun to cheat even a little bit. The man on the cabinet floor was there because Munsterberg suspected that Eusapia was connected by wires with the cabinet. He wanted to cross her wires and mix her signals to the "spirits."

But, oh, what a surprise! There were no wires. That is the testimony of the man on the floor. Eusapia gave him the foot, he says. But, as he was down already, he couldn't fall for it. Instead, he dabbed it. He squeezed her foot, especially the big toe. And poor Eusapia shrieked a "wild, galling scream" and "she knew that at last she was trapped and her glory shattered," says Munsterberg.

Oh, Hugo! How Could You?

Oh, you Hugo, oh, Eusapia! Hugo, how could you? Just because the lady's foot slipped, why should you trip it? Just because, while in a trance, she threw a shoe, is it any reason you should call her "fraud and humbug," and shatter her glory? Oh, you ungallant pedant to make such a fuss over a careless human pedal!

We, who are not eminent psychologists, are more merciful to the horse that throws a shoe. We pick up the shoe and nail it over the kitchen door, and we call the horse names.

But that awful man on the taxi room floor with his face against the curtain in front of the cabinet door. What says he satisfaction that, while she is a fraud, she does not know she is a fraud? Isn't Hugo the deep one?

Isn't He the Deep One?

And thus does Munsterberg expose the fine Italian foot of Eusapia Palladino. But who will expose the workings of the Munsterberg mind? For far be it from him to say the lady knew she was cheating, or, in her normal state, would attempt fraud. He would not be so misunderstood, even though he did say she realized she "was trapped and her glory shattered." Munsterberg holds the belt in his round-up, "was probably that she violently moved the furniture without perceiving her own movements and without intention." She tried to cheat, she knew she was caught at it but she did not intend to cheat. That's the Munsterberg idea.

"Complex secondary personality" had set in, and she could not help fooling. "Complex hysteria" was to blame for the shoe shedding.

Do you get the explanation of Hugo the Highbrow of Harvard of how he caught Eusapia red-footed and proved to his own

Foreign Hair Critics

Shrewd foreign observers have remarked that if the American woman of middle age would spend a fraction as much money on her hair as she does on her boots and hosiery she would be the most ravishing creature in the world. In France and England the first gray hair is a tragedy, and to avert this tragedy as long as possible is a matter of vital and absorbing moment. When attacked with prompt action, however, this tragic army may be utterly routed or its onslaught at least postponed. Nearly all druggists nowadays carry in stock or can promptly get HAY'S HAIR HEALTH, which is the recognized antidote for prematurely gray hair. It is well to avoid unknown and untested remedies claiming to be just as good as HAY'S HAIR HEALTH. Many of these preparations are distinctly harmful, and their only excuse for being is to trade on the twenty years' reputation and good will that HAY'S HAIR HEALTH has earned by reason of its remarkable efficacy when applied in time. It costs only 50c. or a dollar for a bottle. At druggists or from the manufacturer, Philo Hay Specialties Co., Newark, N. J., U. S. A.

Personalities

By WINIFRED BLACK

IF I had a dozen daughters do you know what I would do with them?

Fine them ten cents every time any one of them began to talk personalities and nothing but personalities.

Me, mine; you, yours; she, hers; he, his. I'm getting to hate the very words.

Men can talk five minutes at a time without dragging in a personality. I wonder why the average woman can't?

I heard two young fellows talking for half an hour the other day. They discussed a boxing match, a polo game, Peary and Cook, Stevenson's "Wreckers," the difference between American football and the English game and a dozen other absolutely impersonal things.

Then they went out somewhere and their two sisters came into the same room, and for one solid hour their air was heavy with what she said, and how he looks, and whether she had a good nose, and whether he really danced well or not. Personalities, personalities, personalities—the room was so suffocated with little ideas about little people that I kept wanting to open the window and let in a regular Winter blizzard, so we'd all get a chance to breathe.

Now, both of those girls are just as bright as their bright brothers.

They've seen as much of the world, are as well educated and at heart just as kindly, yet you couldn't interest them in anything that didn't happen to some one they know, but if you pulled down the eternal heavens to do it I wonder why.

I'm going to tie a bell to every table in my living room, and every time my little girl begins to tell what she said or how she looked I'm going to ring that bell and make her pay a forfeit.

I don't want her to grow up a little minded personality-monger if I can help it.

I want her to grow up into a woman that her husband can talk to for five minutes without having to weigh every word for fear she's going to make a personal application of every syllable he says.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

WANTS COZY HOME MOST

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Saw Wife Hunter's letter. I would like very much to correspond with him, as I am one who cares more for a cozy home than moving pictures. Am twenty-two years of age, blue eyes, light hair, fair, and good housekeeper. Am free to say I have met different ones but they were not my style. Hoping this won't find the waste basket as I love the AMERICAN every eve, will look in hopes to hear from Wife Hunter.

JUST TWENTY-TWO.

NOTHING doing in this column when it comes to making matches. I'm always at the service of the lovelorn so far as giving advice, but cannot act as a matrimonial bureau.

FAINT HEART

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl 22 years of age and am going, with a young fellow about my own age, but do not love him. There is another fellow whom I do love. I think of him day and night. But my friends tell me to drop him. Shall I give my attentions to the fellow my friends dislike or to the one my friends all like?

Anxious, A ROLLER SKATER.

Portland, Me.

DON'T waste the first young man's time since you do not love him and then follow your own judgment in regard to the other fellow. You are the one to please not your friends.

"Behind the Scenes"

Time—One hour before the "curtain goes up."

Place—Any one of several million homes where Pompeian Massage Cream is used.

The Cast—A man and wife who insist on being "Pompeian Clean" before "going on."

She—A woman who has discovered how Pompeian Massage Cream freshens and clears the complexion; how it rubs in and rolls out; how it brings out pore-dirt that even soap and water can't reach; how it removes "shine" and sallowness; how it does the work of face-powders without their harmful, pore-clogging results; and how it preserves youth and beauty by preventing wrinkles and other ravages of time and worry.

He—A man who has discovered that Pompeian Massage Cream is indispensable after a shave, or after a day's dusty work or sport. He knows that Pompeian takes out of the pores all smarting soap particles or infecting dust and soot. He knows, as you should know, how Pompeian strengthens the skin for easy, close shaving, and soon brings that healthy, ruddy glow of the athlete. Pompeian is rubbed in and rubbed out. Nothing is left on the face. It is the complete cleanser.

Pompeian Massage Cream

"Don't envy a good complexion; use Pompeian and have one"

Don't! Don't! Don't! If you are seriously interested in possessing a clear, fresh complexion you must not confuse Pompeian Massage Cream with "cold" or "grease" creams. The latter have their uses, and we have not one word to say against them.

But Pompeian Massage Cream is entirely different in purpose, use and results. "Cold" or "grease" creams are rubbed onto the skin and stay there. Pompeian Massage Cream enters the pores, and in a few seconds rolls out, bringing with it all the infecting pore-dirt that even your best soap couldn't reach.

It is this rolling out feature which distinguishes Pompeian from "cold" or "grease" creams. It is this rubbing-in and rubbing-out process which keeps the skin free from blackheads, sallowness and premature wrinkles. Use all the good "cold" creams you care to, but to acquire a natural clearness and freshness you must treat your skin to the cleansing and stimulating effect of a Pompeian massage with Pompeian Massage Cream. Cream sent to all parts of the world, postage paid, if dealer can't supply you.

THE LATEST STYLES IN KNITTING AND CROCHETING

A New and Striking Crocheted Coat

Here is something really new in coat sweaters—a striped pattern. Broad stripes of a beautiful rompanek knot stitch are separated by a slender stripe of a contrasting color—gray with white; white with black, red or navy; tan with brown or olive, are some of the popular combinations. This is an extremely useful coat—warm, light, comfortable. It is particularly charming for the high school girl. Nine hanks of Fleisher's Knitting Worsted are required. This is the strongest yarn made. A trifle wiry in nature, it works up into a close texture, while giving full value to every stitch.

Full directions for making this and many other new and staple articles may be found in Fleisher's Knitting and Crocheting Manual, an invaluable handbook for beginner and expert. Contains a complete course of instruction in the various stitches and is the only authoritative guide to fashion in articles made of yarn.

How Are You on Cooking Buckwheat Cakes? $25 in Prizes for Best Recipes

Are you a good cook? If so why not enroll yourself in the AMERICAN'S honor roll of New England's good cooks, and perhaps win a cash prize.

Anyway, your recipe for buckwheat cakes may be just what a lot of the New England housewives wanted to get. Send it along.

The AMERICAN'S buckwheat cake contest closes Saturday night at 6 p. m., and the winners will be announced in Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN.

If you haven't sent in your recipes yet, there is ample time to do so now.

Here is the proposition:

John Wiggins, who, you remember, appears two or three times a week in the funny pictures in the editorial page, wants to know how to make those buckwheat cakes he used to eat when a boy.

The AMERICAN will give $25 in cash prizes for the persons sending in the best recipes for buckwheat cakes.

The prizes are:

First prize, $10.
Second prize, $5.
And prizes of $1 each.

Address JOHN WIGGINS, BOSTON AMERICAN, Boston. Write on ONE side of paper only, and DO NOT pin letter sheets together.

Here are some of the best recipes received:

Must Have Buttermilk.

John Wiggins, Boston American:

Sir—If you wish buckwheat cakes the same as mother used to make, it is essential to have buttermilk fresh from the churn, and buckwheat flour fresh from the farm (not patented flour).

Take one quart of buttermilk, sift into it one cupful of flour, and enough buckwheat flour to make a thin batter; add one teaspoonful of salt. Place on top of this batter, a very scant teaspoonful of soda. Pour over same two tablespoonfuls of hot water and stir briskly. Fry in piping hot griddle, well greased with pork rind. This will make enough, I think, John, to satisfy your appetite.

MRS. F. W. COPY.
Millinocket, Maine.

She Writes Poetry, Too.

John Wiggins, Boston American:

Buckwheat cakes are my favorite dish;
In the morn they are my wish,
Puffy, light and brown,
With golden drip upon.

MELT IN YOUR MOUTH.

Heat a pint of buckwheat flour; one of white flour, quarter pint of cornmeal, a little salt, two eggs beaten very light, one quart of new milk; make a little warm and mixed with the eggs before the flour is put in, one tablespoonful of butter or sweet lard, two large tablespoonfuls of yeast, set it to rise at night for the morning. If in the least sour, stir in before baking just enough soda to correct the acidity.

MRS. M. TIMMINS.
8 Concord avenue, Somerville.

Tells How to Make Yeast.

John Wiggins, Boston American:

Sir—Below I think you will find the buckwheat cakes you are seeking. Put into a large pitcher one quart of pure buckwheat flour, one even teaspoonful of salt, one-half cup of raw potato yeast (this is the secret). Mix with pure milk and water to a thick batter; beat well; cover over with a cloth and put in a warm place to raise over night. In the morning add one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in three tablespoonful of cold water and hot water taken all the raising power from the soda); put in the pitcher and beat well. If the batter is thick add more milk to a consistency of thick cream. Grease an iron spider well with pure lard and then fry.

Just set a plate of these cakes with some creamery butter and a jar of New Orleans molasses on the table and see names before Uncle John; then watch him grin.

RAW POTATO YEAST.

Take one large potato; peel and grate fine; add at once boiling water till it makes stiff; one teaspoonful salt, one-half cup sugar; stir well; when nearly cold add one-half yeast cake, dissolved in one-half cup cold water; when this is cold enough; let stand five or six hours or until it foams on top.

MRS. FRANCIS J. MARSHALL.
Box 46, Georgetown, Mass.

Old State Maine Style.

JOHN WIGGINS, Boston American:

Sir—Let the buckwheat be of the boiled sort, and fresh. Put into a 2½-quart pitcher one and one-half pints of tepid water; add four tablespoons of baker's yeast, and enough buckwheat flour to make one loaf of bread—other kinds in proportion with a little salt and then stir in buckwheat enough to make a thick batter, cover the pitcher and set in a warm place to raise over night. After beating thoroughly in the morning add three tablespoons of molasses, one scant teaspoonful of soda, dissolved in three tablespoons of milk; beat all well together and pour into cakes from the pitcher upon a well-heated griddle.

WINLI DURANT.
No. 12 Branch street, Dorchester.

Three in One.

Mr. John Wiggins, Boston American:

Sir—To make raised buckwheat cakes, take a small crock or earthen pitcher; put into it a quart of warm water, in half water and half one heaping teaspoonful of salt; then stir in as much buckwheat flour as will thicken it to rather a stiff batter; lastly add half a cup of yeast, or a cake of compressed yeast. Set to rise over night; in the morning add a small level teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a little warm water; grease your iron griddle with a piece of fresh pork; if not too salty, this is very nice, but not a necessary recipe.

There are reasons to believe that leading financial interests do not yet pledge support. Prices are allowed to drift and liquidation bespeaks dissolution.

Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank, had a conference with President Taft relative to the establishment's attitude on the affairs corporative and financial. He returned from Washington apparently satisfied with the result of the interview. Two days later J. P. Morgan went to the capital. Morgan either was not satisfied. He was wrought up.

This information has been going the rounds of the inner circle or banker for several days and is now printed without question as the result for the persistent glimpse and fruitless prospects in the stock market. The deluge in Paris is used in an explanation of Europe's sale of American stocks, when for the first time in weeks transactions were unique. Will Street, certainly the headquarters of a national disaster, and a catastrophe in a nation like France is wholly effective in this age of financial interdependence. But it is well to remember that France, more than any other country, is practically no foreign money in France, while, conversely, French money is placed in every quarter of the globe. No investor outside of France is directly affected by what has occurred in our leading credit country of the world. As regards foreign financial effect, the earthquakes in Italy were far more serious, for Italy is a debtor nation.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS AND ALL THE LATEST FINANCIAL NEWS

LOCAL MARKET PRICES FIRMER

STATE STREET, Jan. 28.—There were no political possibilities or other disturbing features to-day, and stock market prices showed a refreshing feeling. The market has absorbed a large amount of profit taking, together with bear selling and as a result the technical position of the bull party has been materially weakened. The large financial interests seized weakness of the year end and have continued it all through the present month, so that now they are in a position to support the market should it become necessary.

Opening prices to-day were materially higher than morning and the strength of the Hill issues was astounding enough to give a strong tone throughout the entire list. Great Northern preferred rose in advance, rose 2½ points. Pennsylvania was strong but the gain was much less. The latter was yesterday's strong stock and were again in demand. The Amalgamated Company will lose its identity in the merger it will be absorbed into the Anaconda Co., which owns a controlling interest of Amalgamated shares and will reorganize the local distributor of its issues.

The local copper shares market was subject to heavy pressure to-day and there was considerable selling. There are two developments in the copper situation which will be of interest to the local trade. The first is the sharp reduction in the price of copper by the Calumet & Arizona Company. The second is the report that the Boston and Montana Company has secured control of the Greene-Cananea Copper Company. The latter is the largest producer of copper in Mexico. The Boston and Montana Company is one of the largest producers of copper in the United States. The combination will be a powerful one.

The bond market was dull and featureless. Prices were irregular with the tendency downward. Total sales, par value, $1,269,293.

STOCKS RISING, TRADING LIGHT

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Because of the overbold condition of the market stocks opened with material gains to-day. Pennsylvania and Union Pacific were the leaders.

This advance excited renewed liquidation for a few minutes, but after a brief period of hesitation the market recovered again. Trading was very light, however. Some of the best buying was in Reading and it was traced to Philadelphia sources.

There is a rumor of some announcement in connection with Reading. Colorado Fuel & Iron disappointed conservative interests by showing a recovery. The pool in this stock is very rich, but the security is not considered much better than Reading Coal & Iron. Announcement by several railroads of increased wages for employees gave an improved tone to the market for railroad securities, as this is understood to mean an increase of freight rates.

Of the curb market, the copper stocks were strongest.

The Greenwald Shoe Syndicate at Nos. 40 and 42 Summer street is today selling a large stock of shoes, it claims, at a real sacrifice. It is declared that the price cutting through the entire stock of men's, women's and children's shoes and rubbers is the deepest ever known, even at this time. FIRE SCARE IN BACK BAY HOTEL OXFORD

Guests were aroused and in great alarm hurriedly dressed early to-day when a pan of grease in the kitchen of the Hotel Oxford, on 64 Huntington avenue, was overturned, setting the chimney on fire and causing smoke to ebb through the halls and corridors.

When the firemen rushed into the hotel everyone was awake and some were even preparing to leave if it should be necessary. But in a few minutes the excitement was allayed and the guests repaired again to their rooms. The two lower floors of the hotel were filled with smoke before the blaze was extinguished.

At Least Fortune Tellers and Necromancers Do Not Rule Us

Little by Little We Are Progressing. There Is Always Hope

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal-Examiner

Below we offer you a page from Roman history. It isn't very long; you can read it in half a minute. It shows you how the world was once ruled, by the most brutal kinds of superstition, by violent hatred and trickery.

If you are inclined to be despondent about present conditions, if you think the world is going to the dogs when you see a cunning jackal like Elihu Root teaching corporations, in the words of the late William C. Whitney, "WHAT THEY CAN DO," let this quotation make you realize how much worse off the people were at one time. Read the words about Roman conditions—not so very long ago, when you consider what an old thing the human race is:

> The Emperor's fears and suspicions were immensely aggravated by the adepts in the dark arts of the East. The astrologers were a great and baneful power in the early Empire. They inspirited illicit ambitions, or they stimulated them, and they often suggested to a timorous Prince the danger of conspiracy. Those venal impostors in the wars of Tacitus were always being banished, but they always returned, for the men who drove them into temporary exile had the firmest faith in their skill. The Primus would have liked to keep a monopoly of it while he withdrew from his nobles the temptation which might be offered to their ambition by the mercenary adept. Dion Cassius and Suetonius, who were themselves eager believers in this superstition, never failed to record the influence of the diviners. The reign of Tiberius is full of dark tales about them. Claudius drove Scribonianus into exile for consulting an astrologer about the term of his reign. On the appearance of a flaming comet Nero was warned by his diviner, Bilbilus, that a portent, which always boded ill to kings, might be expiated by the blood of their nobles. Otho's astrologer, Seleucus, who had promised that he should survive Nero, stimulated his ambition to be the successor to Galba. Vitellius, as superstitious as Nero or Otho, cruelly persecuted the soothsayers and ordered their expulsion from Italy. He was defied by a mocking edict of tribe, ordaining his own departure from earth by a certain day. Vespasian once more banished the diviners from Rome, but, obedient to the superstition which cradled the power of his dynasty, he retained the most skilful for his own guidance. The terror of Domitian's last days was heightened by a horoscope which long before had foretold the time and manner of his end.

At least, when a comet arrives to visit us in these days we study it with our telescopes, understand it, do not fear it. We know just about what it is. At least, we know what it is not. We know that it ISN'T a flying devil trying to eat the sun. We know that it ISN'T a mysterious messenger coming here to scare the life out of us.

How would you feel if on the arrival of this present comet Taft had been urged by his advisers TO SLAY A FEW MUCK-RAKERS THAT THEIR BLOOD MIGHT EXPIATE THE SINS OF THOSE HIGHER UP!

What would you think if the greatest power in our land were that of some cunning fortune teller or soothsayer?

We are governed rather badly—governed by our own weakness, our own indifference. But at least we are better off than men used to be. Remember that, and do what little you can to make things better still.

The combined efforts of all the protesting, earnest and intelligent men have gradually brought about the improved conditions that we see, and will finally bring about real civilization.

A Test for Wisconsin

It Is Not Thinkable That the Men of Wisconsin Should Defeat La Follette, Who Has Reflected Honor on the State and Earned the Hatred of Trusts

Copyright, 1910, by American Journal-Examiner

The newspapers announce that Senator La Follette is already beginning his campaign for re-election in 1911. La Follette has actually represented the people that VOTED for him. He is a man who is absolutely, justly and thoroughly hated by all the organizations engaged in exploiting the people.

La Follette may not be the greatest genius that ever lived—he isn't. And he may not be as radical as some would like to have him, or as conservative as some good friends think he ought to be.

BUT LA FOLLETTE IS AN HONEST MAN. He has worked for the men of Wisconsin who put him in office. He is poor, with not a dollar except his salary to take care of himself and his family. He could do what the others do. He could be "let into good things." He could retire from the Senate rich if he wanted to. Instead of that, he is struggling for re-election, struggling for the chance to do once more the good work to which the people are entitled. Strange to say, this man, for years a Senator of the United States, for years in the body where the Archbolds and the others are so active, ACTUALLY NEEDS THE PEOPLE'S SALARY TO SUPPORT HIMSELF AND HIS WIFE AND CHILDREN.

The corporations boast that they will defeat La Follette. This newspaper does not believe it. Men in Wisconsin know La Follette; they have seen him and studied him for years; they know his enemies; they know the results that he has shown.

It is unthinkable that they should allow him to be beaten.

Popular Songs

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"When the Trusts Are in the Breadline, Jennie Dear"

I'n a Cambridge home so cheery sat a suitor and his dearie,
While the rubber plants waved gently overhead:
She was sweet, and young, and slender, them eyes of hers beamed tender,
He was fatter than the mattress on a bed.
"When shall we wed, dear Ambrose?" she whispered in his ear,
"When shall we do the lockstep up the aisle?"
Then the suitor, in a jar, threw away his dead cigar,
And unto her did answer, after gazing wistfully into her dark eyes and reveling in her fresh young beauty:

CHORUS.

"When the Trusts are in the Breadline, Jennie dear,
You and I shall wed and go away from here,
Life will then be milk and meat,
You and I shall drink and eat,
When the Trusts are in the Breadline, Jennie dear."

II.

From that Cambridge house of gloom went the suitor to his room,
And the rubber plants were sadly drooping now;
Then the young girl did exclaim, "Poor old Ambrose lacks game;
Well, I really might have known it anyhow."
She wed a wealthy butcher just a month from that sad night;
Now the girl is nice and plump and Ambrose thinner.
No doubt he often does regret the words he said that night,
Two hours and twenty minutes after dinner.

CHORUS.

"When the Trusts are in the Breadline, Jennie dear," etc.

A Guide to the Professions

By WEX JONES

Aeronaut—Now is the time to get in on the ground floor of aeronautics, or aeronavigation, or whatever the word is. Before the air gets so full of planes that the farmers kick because the crops get no rain there is a chance to get up in the world. To become an aeronaut it is advisable to take a two years' course in some correspondence school. After graduation take a post-graduate course.

Auburn Cop—To be a success at this profession it is necessary to begin training at an early age. The best plan of all is to get a large safe and fill it with bricks. Say it holds 450 bricks. Then get 500 more bricks and pile them up in front of the already jammed safe. Now put your shoulder to the pile and smash all the additional bricks into the safe and shut the door.

Song Writer—To become a successful song writer all that is necessary is to write a song that is successful. This profession is thus one of the simplest in its requirements.

Sailor—The greatest drawback to this profession is that, except in the case of yacht sailors, it is almost necessary to spend part of the time on water, with the result that you are very likely to become seasick.

Chicken Farmer—With the price of eggs hovering around the clouds, many persons think that chicken farming is a sure road to wealth. There are two ways to begin a farm of this kind. One is to get eggs and hatch them into chickens; the other is to get hens and have them lay eggs. One way is about as likely to lose money as the other.

Tailor—This is one of the easiest jobs in the world, mainly consisting of sitting in an office year after year waiting for some one to pay a bill.

Lion Tamer—To prevent waste of time in studying for a profession for which you might be unsuited get a large and savage bull terrier and lock yourself in the room with it. Carry nothing more than a small switch and a hope. If you succeed in making the dog jump through the hoop to built an hour you may proceed with confidence, working down from the bull terrier to lions and tigers.
